Preface

In the beginning, each Smeltzer branch with an Irish tradition thought of itself as virtually alone, with few relatives in the world. The Smeltzers of Kilcooly, published in 1981, set out to combine known facts, verify or amend traditions and dig deeper into the Palatine background and Irish experience of the clan. Publication made this data available to hundreds of descendants and encouraged further research.

Much new material has been located for the Smeltzers who remained in Limerick and those who went to Tipperary. This new book is a SEQUAL not a revision. It adds information about Kilcooly in the 19th century, extends several branches in Canada, includes others in Australia, England, No. Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. Some details in the first book have been revised. The clan is seen in relation to economic and social developments of the period.

Biographical data of the 20th century have been obtained largely from descendants. Traditions have been used as clues and checked against other sources when possible. The destruction of many Irish records in 1922 made it necessary to use "maybe - possibly - probably" at times. "Facts" sometimes conflicted. Reasoned conclusions can lead to further study.

Many genealogists drop females after a generation or two. Here the Smeltzer women have been followed through numerous changes of surname. Smeltzer grandmothers, buried under their husbands' names, emerge with their own identities. Infants are included to preserve traditional names and family size.

Before the Irish Smeltzers arrived in Canada, two Smelsers had immigrated directly from the continent in the 18th century, two more came in the 19th. Part IV describes these Canadian families to distinguish those of direct German ancestry from the Irish-Palatines.

Visits to Canada, Ireland, Australia and England to meet present-day descendants helped to achieve a better understanding of the clan's new homelands. Research in these countries added valuable data. Those who emigrated moved ahead economically and socially, developed a new sense of equality. Those who remained adjusted to the loss of their Protestant privileges and found success in the mainstream of Irish life.

Ireland and Beyond

In Search of

If you go to Kilcooley, Co. Tipperary (the modern spelling) hoping to find the home in which your great-grandfather lived, the fields he ploughed or the neighbors he knew, you will probably be disappointed. The Slieverdagh Hills, the green valleys and the Devil's Bit are still there, but most of the old houses are gone. Land reform and a government reforestation program have changed much of the landscape.

It is nearly 125 to 150 years since Kilcooly parish (the 19th century spelling) teemed with life; most of the old names are gone. When families emigrated, homes were often abandoned and fell to ruin, the limestone walls and foundation stones carried away to build other houses. Cabins were tumbled. Sometimes relatives took up the vacated land. Otherwise, it reverted to the landlord. Long term leases (3 lives) were held in the name of the original lessee even though others might have houses on the land. Palatine families usually emigrated as a unit, sometimes with elderly parents. By mid-century unmarried daughters and landless younger sons often set out alone. Rarely did they return. The Kilcooly Parish Church, which had 200-300 communicants on a Sunday in 1844, overflowing the gallery, had 67 in 1891. It is one of six churches served by the same rector. Another closed because there were not enough members left to pay to repair the roof.

The people of Kilcooly were farmers in love with the land. Even though some could afford to buy it, the land was rarely for sale. The landlords of the Abbey, who had held the estate since 1637, were among the more progressive resident landowners, interested in the welfare of their tenants. The land was their capital, the rents their income. The tenant farmer had existed for centuries; the benevolent landlord was the ideal.

Ireland's economic woes, religious strife and rural unrest made life difficult for Protestant freeholders in the early 19th century. Their lifestyle and livelihood were threatened. Rather than join their rebellious neighbors they left to find land and freedom elsewhere. More than 20 years before the Great Famine of 1848 many determined to emigrate before all was lost. Most turned to Canada. Virgin land was being opened up and could be purchased on favorable terms by occupying and clearing it. British ships bringing lumber and furs from Canada took emigrants as ballast on the trip west.

Relatives often took up land near each other in adjoining townships. Neighbors settled nearby. Since farms were often 100 to 200 acres, young people had limited opportunities for meeting new people. Frequently they married cousins or related families as they had in Ireland. Gravitating first to Peel & Halton Cos., the settlers soon turned to the new lands that had been surveyed on the Huron Tract. Farms could be sold profitably to newcomers and virgin land, at a lower price, purchased in the new townships in western Ontario. Relatives clustered nearby.

In Co. Limerick the old homes of the Palatines have been leveled. Virtually all that remains in Ballingrane, the Smeltzers' village, is a memorial church to Philip Embury, who emigrated to the American Colonies in 1760 and became the founder of the American Methodist Society in New York. Vital 18th century records of Rathkeale Parish are missing.

Among the sources for names in southern Ireland is the Tithe Applotment Book (Co. TIP 1826), which registered occupiers and owners responsible for tithes to the Established Church. The Griffith Primary Valuation (1850-51 in Co. TIP) determined the amount of tax each tenant should pay towards the support of the poor in his Poor Law Union. Sub-tenants were not recorded. Some baptismal and marriage records survived the burning of the archives in Dublin in 1922. Family traditions should be documented when possible. Duplication of Christian names can be both helpful and frustrating.

From 1700 to 1875 many Irish, like Dutch and German, followed a traditional naming pattern. This often helps to place an individual in the appropriate branch or to guess the names of grandparents. The pattern is not infallible!

|---|---|---|---|
| 1st son: | father's father | 1st dau: | mother's mother |
| 2nd son: | mother's father | 2nd dau: | father's mother |
| 3rd son: | father | 3rd dau: | mother |
| 4th son: | father's eldest brother | 4th dau: | mother's eldest sister |

When the system produced a duplication of name, the name was taken from the next on the list. A break in the pattern could be caused by the death of an infant. A name important to the family might be repeated if the first died young.

Other Irish sources are Marriage License Indexes grouped by Diocese. They do not show the month or place of marriage and are not complete. Kilcooly church records do not begin until 1845. A few baptismal records exist in local parishes; finding them is a matter of chance. Irish civil registration of births and deaths began in 1869 but was not universal in the early years. Census rolls have been destroyed; only summaries remain. A few lists of Kilcooly Parish pewholders survive but do not identify families. Relationships can sometimes be inferred among those who shared a pew. Ages must be guessed by census records (in Canada), baptismal records, marriage licenses, death certificates and family Bibles. Frequently they disagree! Names of parents were not required for marriage licenses in Canada before 1858.

In the end, ingenuity, patience and painstaking follow-up of every clue must supplement conventional research. When today's Irish family sits around the fire in the evening, they are more apt to be watching the "telly" than relating family stories. No bit of information is too small to horde. Sooner or later these bits have proved a perfect fit with data from halfway around the world.

The first step is to determine whether one's ancestors had an Irish tradition or came directly from Germany.

Spelling variations include SMELTZER, SMELZER, SMELSER, SMELCER, SMELSOR etc., often within the same family. They are therefore grouped together in the index. Census takers and clerks sometimes confused the name with SWITZER or SPENCER, or spelled it as it sounded. SMELTZER is the most usual form among the Irish-Palatines. Sounding the name orally is often the best way to tell whether it "belongs."

THE PALATINATE TO LIMERICK

Before 1709

The Palatinate was a German state in the region of the Rhine, one of seven Electorates for the Holy Roman Empire. From the 14th to the 16th centuries it included two territories, the Rhine or the Lower Palatinate and the Upper Palatinate which was part of Bavaria.

Frederick V, the Elector, related to the house of Orange, went to England in 1613 to marry Elizabeth Stuart, daughter of James I. In 1619 Frederick was offered the Crown of Bohemia and accepted. The young ruler was quickly defeated by Emperor Ferdinand of Austria. Ferdinand was determined to root out Protestantism in the Palatinate, a stronghold of Calvinism. Young Frederick and his wife fled to England.

In 1648 the Rhine Palatinate was restored to Charles Louis, oldest surviving son of Frederick, and an 8th Electorate given him. His youngest sister Sophia married Ernest Augustus, who became Elector of Hanover in 1692. In the Act of Settlement, the British Parliament named Sophia next in succession to Princess Anne (later Queen.) All of Anne's 17 children died in infancy. Sophia died in 1714, age 84. Two months later her son George Louis became George I of England.

When Charles, son of Charles Louis of the Palatinate, died in 1685, he was succeeded by Philip William of Neuberg, a Roman Catholic. His claim to the Rhine Palatinate was contested by Louis XIV of France on behalf of his sister-in-law, a daughter of the Elector Charles Louis. Years of terror, burning, pillage and the scattering and annihilation of much of the population followed. An especially vicious campaign launched by Marshal de Villers in 1707 forced the population to flee once more. The story of the mass migration to Rotterdam in 1709 and the rescue of the Palatines by the British is told in The Smeltzers of Kilcooly.

The Southwell Colony

Sir Thomas Southwell, who became Baron Southwell in 1717, was an Irish lord and member of Parliament, interested in fostering the linen industry and increasing the Protestant population. On his estate in Rathkeale, Co. Limerick, was settled the largest colony of Palatines (approximately 1200), at Court Mattress, Killiheen and Ballingrane. Subsequently many moved to Adare, Pallaskenry, Askeaton, Kilfinane and Ballyorgan in Co. Limerick; Castle Island in Co. Kerry; Kilcooly, Co. Tipperary; and Palatinetown, Co. Carlow. Sir Thomas loaned his tenants considerable sums of money and helped with gifts of various kinds, including timber for their homes. In 1712 he asked the government to repay some of his expenses, noting that about 130 were settled there and successfully raising hemp, flax and livestock. His heirs were Roman Catholic and less sympathetic to the Palatines.

In 1711, only 577 families remained of the 821 that had been brought to Ireland in 1709 and 1710. In 1712 there were 263 families and 979 persons left in Ireland. Fifty years later John Wesley estimated that there had been 110 families settled on Lord Southwell's estate.

Rt. Hon. Silver Oliver settled 60 families of approximately 700 individuals in Kilfinane, Co. LIM, about 1740. Some of these later married into families in Kilcooly. Sir Richard Quin, father of the first Lord Dunraven, established a colony of Palatines at Adare in 1776. Col. Blennerhasset brought Palatines to his estate at Arabella, near Castle Island, Co. Kerry, about 30 years earlier. In 1776 there were 15 or 16 families there. He gave each family a cow, horse and everything needed for a year and leased small farms at half their value. Palatines introduced the wheeled plough and replaced the sliding Irish cart with a wheeled cart. Sir William Barker invited Palatines to Kilcooly, Co. Tipperary, in 1772. The Palatines' Limerick neighbors were jealous of the Palatines' success, but made no effort to imitate them. Wrote M. de Latocnaye in 1795, "I suppose the Palatines will finish by becoming Irish like their neighbors."

Dr. R.T. Mitchell, after visiting Limerick in 1893, observed that many of the Palatines had a "foreign type of feature, are strongly built, swarthy in complexion, dark-haired and dark-eyed." However, the typical Smeltzer in the 19th century was of medium stature, fair complexion, with light or medium brown hair and piercing bright blue eyes. Samuel Hall, touring the country before the Famine, commented on the somber look of the women and their bright blue eyes! Because of frequent marriages within the clan, cousins often looked like brothers and sisters. Most of the Smeltzers were extremely long-lived; families of 6 to 10 or more were common. Twins occur in almost all of the branches.

Limerick Sources

A number of classic and frequently quoted works are rich in details of the life and character of the Palatines: Journal of Rev. John Wesley; Arthur Young's Tour of Ireland; de Latocnaye's A Frenchman's Walk in Ireland; Mr. & Mrs. Samuel Hall's Ireland: Its Scenery, Character etc.; Dr. Richard Hayes The German Colony in Limerick; Rev. William Crook The Centenary of American Methodism. Other data are found in private and government papers and letters. Highlights of the Limerick experience are described in The Smeltzers of Kilcooly.

Limerick & Tipperary Smeltzers

In the 3rd quarter of the 18th century, Philip Smelser (1733) and Paul Smelser (1736) were freeholders in Ballingrane, Co. LIM. Philip's eldest son David remained in Limerick. David's oldest son Philip joined the British Army. Three other children settled in Tecumseh, Michigan, USA: two of David's younger brothers went to upper New York State. David's grandson Philip, born in Tasmania, returned to New South Wales. His siblings stayed in England. The Smeltzer name disappeared from Limerick.

Philip's younger brother Paul moved to the Barker estate, Kilcooly parish, Co. Tipperary, in 1772-73. He was the common ancestor of a number of Smeltzer branches. Most of the Tipperary Smeltzers emigrated to Canada, some to the United States, others to England, No. Ireland and Australia. A few moved to other parts of Ireland: Co. Meath, Co. Kildare, Co. Dublin, Co. Cork, Co. Waterford. Gwen Smeltzer of Swords (near Dublin) may be the last to bear the name in Ireland.

THE FIRST IRISH-PALATINE SMELTZERS

All Irish-Palatine Smeltzers are believed to be descended from Peter Smelser.

The earliest Smelsers (Schmeltzer) recorded in Ireland were Peter and Christopher, heads of families on the rolls of Palatines on the estate of Lord Southwell in Ballingrane, Nantinan Parish, Co. LIM in 1715 and 1720. They were part of the mass migration of Palatines from the Rhine Valley to London in 1709 and were among those relocated in Ireland to support the Protestant cause. The historic migration is detailed in The Smeltzers of Kilcooly. About half the Palatines arrived in army transports and are documented. Others came in small private boats. Hank Jones (Palatine Families of Ireland) noted "Stoffelmelser" (Christopher) in the 5th party of Palatines at Rotterdam in 1709. He may be Christopher Smelser.

The name Christopher does not appear again. In 1738, Christof, a widower, and Johann Phillip Schmeltzer sailed from Rotterdam to Philadelphia on The Thistle. Christopher may have returned to the Continent and re-embarked for the Colonies. America was the original goal of most of the Palatines.

Freeholder records in the 18th century in Limerick show Peter, Philip and Paul in Ballingrane and Peter in Killiheen in 1755. The two Peters may be the same person, or one a son of the immigrant Peter. Three Smeltzer families are listed in the census of Protestants for Nantinan Parish: Peter (2), Philip (4), Paul (6). Whether Philip and Paul were sons or grandsons of Peter is not known. The men often married late, had children over a 20-year period or had two wives.

No Smeltzers are listed in the Tithe Applotment for Ballingrane in 1825. However, David and Adam signed a petition in 1830 to retain the Act of Union. They may have been sons of David Sr.

Paul Smelser was one of five heads of families who settled on the uplands of the Barker estate in Newpark. Named on the lease for 3 lives was Paul's son John, age 3. Each lessee was required to build a 2-story house for one family. Three of the original houses are still standing: Switzer, Ruckel (Ruttall) and Smeltzer (later Sparling). Palatine St. goes through the townlands of Grangehill, Bonlea and Newpark and is connected by lanes to Renaghmore.

Sebastian Lawrence (originally Lorentz), one of the five lessees, had land in Banse Glebe, Kilmanagh Parish, Co. KIK in 1850. Adam Baker (originally Becker), another of the Newpark five and his son Michael are listed in the 1825 Tithe Applotment for Co. LIM. They may have returned.

Switzers (Schweitzer) are among the most numerous Palatine families. John Switzer is placed by Hank Jones in Castleton, Co. TIP (near the Co. Laois border) in 1776; his son Martin was born there in 1778. John may not have moved his family to Newpark until several years after the lease.

Daniel Ruckel, another partner, may have been in Co. TIP earlier. Sebastian Ruckel was a freeholder in Ballingrane in 1747; his son Philip went to Newpark shortly after 1755. Phillip's son Daniel is presumed to be the lessee. A Daniel died 17 Sept. 1808 age 79 and is buried in Nantinan, Co. LIM. His son Daniel Jr. died 14 Apr. 1784 age 19. John Ruckel of Newpark is believed to be a nephew or a cousin. Later generations spelled the name Ruttal or Ruttle.

Until it can be proved which Smeltzers were brothers and which cousins, the known branches have been charted separately, beginning with a proved ancestor.

SHIPWRECK AND OTHER TRADITIONS

How did the Smeltzers arrive in Ireland? Several branches have a tradition that they set out for America and were shipwrecked off the Irish coast. One branch places the landing near the mouth of the Shannon about 1660. The date is questionable. Cromwell had left Ireland and Charles II was on the throne. The exiled Palsgrave Charles Louis had returned to the Palatinate in 1648, encouraged immigration to build up his devastated and depopulated country, introduced reforms and reopened the University of Heidelberg. Not until 1671 and 1677 did William Penn visit the Palatines to recruit settlers for Penn's Woods in the American Colonies.

A Northern Ireland origin is also advanced. During WW I Gordon Elgin Smeltzer reported seeing at Downpatrick, Co. Down, a Smeltzer tombstone of the 17th century, about 1615. A search of memorial inscriptions in print has revealed nothing. The graves are now overgrown and inscriptions eroded. Another suggested site is Portadown, settled by a group from the German section of Switzerland. Many Palatines from the Kraichgau were refugees from Switzerland in the mid-1600's and moved on with the Palatines in 1709. No evidence for Portadown has been found.

Patrickswell, Co. LIM is also named as a place where the Smeltzers arrived after being shipwrecked. They are said to have made their way to the Southwell Estate and joined the Palatines there. An American branch believes that the party started out for America and put ashore because one of the women was pregnant.

An English branch claiming Dutch origin may have misinterpreted "came from Rotterdam" as meaning "lived there," rather than "embarked" from there. Another story is that they were Swedish!

Still others believe that Smeltzers fought for King William. The Battle of the Boyne, which assured William and Mary of the throne, took place in 1690, 20 years before the mass migration of Palatines. Some Palatines fought for the British on the continent. Smeltzers might have been among them. Membership in the Orange Order could have been confused with being in William's army.

The Irish Times of 1933, reporting a court case involving Smeltzers, stated that the family were Palatines of Bavaria, planted by the Duke of Ormond in 1706 in Tipperary. There is no evidence that Smelsers were in Tipperary before Paul signed the Newpark lease in 1773. The Kilcooly Abbey estate was purchased in 1637 by Sir Jerome Alexander from the Duke of Ormond. The 2nd Duke spent most of his life abroad, fighting under the Duke of Marlborough.

The most likely explanation is that Smeltzers were part of the mass migration of Palatines in 1709 and were relocated in Co. LIM by the London Board of Trade in 1709 or with a second party in 1712. They may have arrived in London in a small boat, or they could have been shipwrecked off the Irish coast while attempting to cross the Atlantic. A shipwreck might also be a plausible invention to explain the presence of German Protestants in Catholic southern Ireland.

The Landlords of Kilcooly Abbey

When Paul Smelser signed the Newpark lease in 1773, the landlord was the 4th Sir William Barker, who had inherited the estate in 1770 and had been managing it since 1757. Ambitious to improve it and increase its Protestant population, he advertised for tenants in Finn's Leister Journal in Mar. 1772 and Mar. 1774. He offered acreage in Renaghmore suitable for dairying and improved bogland to be held in common. He persuaded a number of Palatine families to settle on his lands. Five who signed a communal lease in Newpark were Paul Smelser, Sebastian Lawrence and Adam Baker of Ballingrane, Co. Limerick and John Switzer and Daniel Ruckle, already in Tipperary. The Palatines had a reputation for thrift, industry and advanced farming methods. Mary Quin, Sir William's mother, was from Adare, where a small colony was planted in 1776. Attracted to the Barker estate were Cromwellian descendants, Williamites (who had fought for William of Orange) and Huguenots from nearby parishes whose ancestors had fought at the Battle of the Boyne. Families included Bible, Cole, Cook, Dolmege, Glazier, Miller, Steepe and Sparling.

In 1775-6 there were 24 Protestant freeholders on the electoral rolls for the parish, including Smeltzer, Ruttall, Lawrence, four Millers, two Youngs. By 1781 there were 39 Protestant families in the parish.

The 4th Sir William was probably the builder of the Palladian manor house, referred to as The Big House. It may have been started as early as the 1760's. In his portrait, painted by Gilbert Stuart, Sir William is shown studying the plans. In 1789 he added an artificial lake and Gothic boathouse. The trees which now line the driveway were part of a reforestation project in this century. In his later years Sir William spent a good deal of time in Bath, England.

Sir William had no male heir to inherit his title. His older daughter Mary married Chambre Brabazon Ponsonby, a family with nearby estates and a grandson of the Earl of Bessborough. Chambre died in 1762, leaving his widow, a daughter and a posthumous son Chambre, now the heir, who took the name Ponsonby-Barker. When Mary remarried, her children remained at Kilcooly, brought up by their aunt and uncle.

Chambre, known as Chum, inherited the estate in 1818. Commissioned in the Green Horse Regiment in 1783, he tired of the small garrison towns and resigned his commission in 1793, when he married Lady Harriet Taylor, a daughter of the Earl of Bective. By 1820 there were nearly 50 Palatine families living on the hill - too many for the land to support.

The next heir, William Barker, Chum's son, dropped Ponsonby from his name. He believed in fair play within the existing order and did not see the need for radical change. As a defense against frequent agrarian disorders, he established in Kilcooly an Orange Lodge with 112 members (including most of the Palatines on the hill.) While it was an illegal association, the Protestants felt it was necessary for their protection. Barker was also a member of the Masonic Order. In 1839 all but one wing of the Big House was destroyed by a chimney fire, set by a disgruntled butler who had been abruptly dismissed. By 1843 it had been rebuilt, further diminishing the family fortune. During William's ownership, many prosperous Protestant farmers began to emigrate, weary of politics and turbulence. Emigration, spurred by famine, cut Barker's tenantry by more than half - 50% of the Catholics and 60% of the Protestants. By 1877, when his brother Thomas Henry Ponsonby (who had not changed his name) succeeded William, there were no male Smeltzers left in the parish.

Early History of the Demesne

Kilcooly Abbey demesne has been held continuously by the same family since 1637, although reduced in size by land reform laws of the 20th century. Twice the estate was inherited through the female line. The Abbey, built about 1182 by Donal O'Brien, was a daughter house of the Abbey at Jerpoint, Co. Kilkenny. Its monastic population was probably no more than five or six. Almost completely destroyed by fire in 1445, it was restored by Abbot Philip O'Lanan (Molwanayn) over a number of years - the original Cistercian plan altered.

When the monasteries were dissolved by Henry VIII, James, Earl of Ormond, received the property in 1540. It included a number of tenant cottages, a mill, gardens, orchards and meadows totaling approximately 7000 acres. Nearly seven miles of 12' wall surround the Abbey, about five added during the Famine to provide work for the poor, paid for by William Barker from the sale of family jewels. A "death gate" was opened in the wall so that funerals, instead of passing the Big House, had direct access to the cemetery.

In 1637 the estate was purchased by Sir Jerome Alexander, a lawyer of Norfolk, England, from the 1st Duke of Ormond. Sir Jerome's sharp practices forced him to spend most of his life out of England. The rebellion in Ireland and Cromwell's invasion cost him the estate in 1641. In 1650 there were only 93 inhabitants in Kilcooly, all papists. The countryside had been left a wasteland by Cromwell's soldiers. When Charles II was restored, Alexander was knighted by the King, made a Judge of Common Pleas in Dublin and received back his estate. He operated Kilcooly through agents and probably never saw it. He loathed everything Irish. The Rev. William Neely (Kilcooley: Land and People) calls him a "complex and unpleasant character" and "an unscrupulous legal shark and hanging judge."

In his will, Sir Jerome left the bulk of his Kilcooly estate to his youngest daughter Elizabeth, to be forfeited if she married an Irishman, or one of Irish descent, or a papist. Dutifully she married Sir William Barker of Bocking Hall, Essex -- made a baronet the year of his marriage, perhaps helped by his bride's wealth.

Kilcooly was viewed largely as a source of income. Sir William the 2nd had inherited his father's estate in 1719 but lived mostly in England, making only brief visits to Ireland. His son, the 3rd Sir William, educated and brought up in Ireland, had ambitious plans for developing the estate and building a magnificent residence, but was short of money. He had a town house in Dublin where he spent the winters. At Kilcooly he continued to live in the half-ruined Abbey in rooms that were constructed in the nave 50 years before. In 1735 he turned over the responsibilities of the estate to his son, retaining half the revenues for himself.

The Protestant Church

In 1728 the Rev. John Walsh had been appointed as a resident rector. In 1733 he leased from the Barker estate a house and a few acres which served as a rectory. When the Palatines arrived, they worshipped in a small chapel on the Abbey grounds, built in the 17th century, across the road from the Walsh home. An estate map of 1746 is marked with a church. A Glebe house, occupied by the curate, was built in 1818. By 1826 the church was falling into disrepair. More room was needed for the growing congregation, but the church was hemmed in by graves and tombs. Paul Smelser's tombstone (1808) is among those in the old churchyard. When the Walsh lease expired, the house was torn down and a new church built on the site in 1829.

In 1835 there were 3,296 Catholics and 612 Protestants in the Parish. Another hundred went to the Methodist Chapel in Bonlea. Service was held every second Sunday by a minister from Kilkenny. Some attended both, continuing to go to the Established Church for baptism and marriage. In the 20th century the Methodist congregation declined. Services were held less frequently and the chapel closed in 1966.

Over the years the interior of the Kilcooly Church deteriorated, marred by damp walls, crumbling plaster and broken flagstones and moth-eaten cushions. Mary Plunkett, daughter of Lord Dunsany and wife of Chambre Ponsonby, writing in 1869, called the congregation "bigoted... obstinately low church." From time to time the interior was redecorated, with the help of the landlord, for a constantly declining congregation, eroded by emigration and inter-faith marriages. Now more than 150 years old, the church is still in use every Sunday.

19th Century Agricultural Ireland

A majority of the Palatines in Kilcooly were freeholders, at the top of the farming community. Although not all the families "on the hill" were Palatines, the Cromwellians, Williamites and Huguenots had a common bond of Protestantism. Marriages with first or second cousins or relatives of in-laws were frequent. Unless a girl could bring a dowry of land, cash or cattle, she was not considered a suitable bride for a farmer's son. Often double marriages were arranged between brothers and sisters. Marriage to a Catholic was frowned on.

The superior position of the Protestant Palatines may have been due partly to their more fertile land, which they had cleared from bush, and partly to their superior farming methods. Many had been converted by John Wesley's evangelism and followed his strict code of living. Their denunciation of drinking, dancing, card-playing, swearing etc. tended to keep them apart from their Irish neighbors.

Union with England in 1801 had not brought hoped-for peace and prosperity. Agrarian riots were widespread. In Renaghmore, eight official tenants had 31 families living in 29 houses on Palatine Street. Some of the more prudent farmers began to leave Kilcooly about 1820, preferring to sell out and make a new start in Canada. Some had enough money to buy acreage immediately.

Conditions worsened. Tithes to support the Established Church, levied in the 1830's on Catholics and Protestants alike, contributed to the violence. The country had almost no middle class of professional men or merchants, especially in the country towns. There were 3 levels of society: those who owned the land, those who leased it and those who worked on it. The Industrial Revolution scarcely touched the south.

Unable to compete with the price of foreign grain, farmers turned more than ever to cattle, pigs and poultry as their main exports, requiring even fewer agricultural laborers. The cultivation of turnips, mangels (for cattle) and green vegetables was advocated by agriculturalists, but potatoes remained the staple food for most of the population.

By 1830 nearly 2½ million workers were paupers. Some economists urged English and Irish to emigrate to save themselves from excessive taxes, support of the clergy and inflation.

Townlands were joined into Poor Law Unions in 1841. Each electoral division was charged for the relief of the poor it sent to the workhouse. Most of the poor preferred begging. The Poor Law Unions became a financial burden on the backs of landlords and productive farmers. The right to vote was given to those who had 10 pounds, a requirement met by many Palatines, few Catholics. In 1841, a wagonload of Palatines, bound for Ballingarry to vote, was set upon by a band of angry Catholics.

The Palatine families were growing without thought of the ability of the land to support them. Tax assessments in the Griffith Primary Valuation of 1850-51 were based on the value of the soil, convenience to markets etc. Other factors were climate, steepness of slopes, roads and ferries. The native Irish, as a whole, showed little interest in improving their farming methods. Land was soon ruined by burning it off to fertilize it and not replenishing nutrients. The potato was grown by a "lazy bed" method, earthing up the plant as it grew. Cotters were then idle for the rest of the winter and free to attend weekly and monthly fairs.

Only 7% of the farms had more than 30 acres, 12% from 15 to 30, 36% from 5 to 15, 45% from 1 to 5. Houses were of four classes: (1) more than 9 rooms; (2) 5 to 9 rooms; (3) mud houses with 2 to 4 rooms and windows; (4) 1-room mud cabins. Three-fourths of all houses were class 3 or 4. Some families rented a conacre, a small parcel of land occupied for a single season to grow one crop. A few farms were held in common, each family's share determined by the rent paid.

Although at least one-fifth of the population had no work, two-thirds of those 26 to 35 were married and produced large families. Four-fifths lived in villages with as few as 20 houses. Some men emigrated seasonally to England to find work in the towns. Illiteracy was high.

As famine swept over Ireland in the 1840's, most of the Palatines survived. They had sheep, cattle, pigs, fowl, barns filled with grain and garden produce. Unlike Catholics in the lowlands, they did not depend on the potato.

The decimation of the Irish was caused not by famine alone but by the abject poverty, wretched housing, lack of trade, backward agriculture and failed industries that preceded it. Government efforts to provide work were costly and ineffective. The Palatines, a minority, were caught in the net. Without land or a trade, many of the Palatines' younger sons chose emigration as a way out. A few were attracted to the army or the constabulary.

Population Patterns

Within the Abbey demesne were uplands suitable for pasture, growing grain and root crops, quarries of limestone, lowlands, peat and narrow seams of coal. In the late 18th century, the uplands 600-1,000 feet high, were virtually uninhabited. Sir William settled his new tenants primarily in the townlands of Newpark,Renaghmore, Bonlea and Grangehill where they prospered. The religious tenets of the Protestants dominated their way of life; the Catholics were generally more concerned with the next world than their success in this.

In 1821 the civilian parish of Kilcooly had 3,440 tenants, 568 families in 566 houses: 1,754 males, 1,686 females. Of these, 702 were employed in agriculture, 139 in trades, manufacturing and handicrafts; 276 in other occupations. Within the county of Tipperary were a variety of occupations, especially shoe or bootmaker, tailor, breechesmaker, weaver; also baker, butcher, carpenter, cooper, hatter, hosier, huckster (also called hawker, pedler, duffer), mason, miller, nailer, publican and innkeeper.

Only 12 males in Kilcooly in 1831 were classified as capitalists, bankers, professional or other educated men. More than 60% of those employed were small farmers or agricultural workers. Freeholders were responsible for their own lands. A laborer might be a farm hand or work at a trade. Male and female servants, particularly for the upkeep of the Big House, accounted for 144. Servants were often better off than farm laborers.

A decade later there were 3,658 in Kilcooly parish, 658 families in 598 houses, averaging 5.5+ persons per family. In 1849 there were 61 houses on Palatine St. By 1871 the population had dropped more than half to 1,791.

EDUCATION

Early Irish Education

From the time of Henry VII, various efforts were made to introduce parish schools in Ireland. Clergymen were required to set up schools and teach in English. In the reign of Elizabeth I, free schools were ordered established in every diocese and to be taught by Englishmen. Free Schools of the Royal Foundation were introduced under Charles I. Another group of schools known as Classical Schools of Private Foundation were supported by funds from private individuals. There were also English Schools of Private Foundation set up for Protestant children, called "English" because no Latin was taught.

In 1811, only one-thirtieth of the Irish population attended school. In 1821 Kilcooly civil parish had more than 2000 children. Fewer than 175 were in school in 1826! Fifty-two percent of the parish were illiterate in 1841. Many marriage and legal documents in Ireland and in Canada were signed with an "X."

Reports of the Board of Education of 1808-12 rated most of the schools as failures and very few free. Bible Societies undertook the education of the poor. Admittedly Protestant, they were often considered a form of proselytizing. Both the Baptist Irish Society and the Kildare Place Society, instituted in 1811, stressed the reading of the Scriptures without note or comment.

Kilcooly Schools

The Royal Commission on Education reported three schools in Kilcooly Parish in 1826:

1. Kilcooly Townland

The headmaster was Philip Smeltzer, Jr., Protestant. He taught in a one-room thatched house, valued at 10 pounds, built by his father. His income from teaching was about 21 pounds per year. The school had 89 Protestants of the Established Church and 23 Roman Catholics: 67 males, 45 females. It was supported by the Baptist Irish Society, who paid the Master according to the number of scholars, e.g., for 100 students, 20 pounds. The Scriptures were read in the Authorized Version.

The 1821 census referred to the school as "Anabaptist." Anabaptists, an offshoot of Calvinism, denied the validity of infant baptism, baptised believers only, advocated social and economic reforms and the separation of Church and State.

This was not a "hedge" (outdoor) school. However, since the school had only one room, classes may well have been held out-of-doors near the Master's Rock in fine weather. The school is not shown on Griffith's Primary Valuation of 1850. Very likely it was on Philip's own land, which he leased from the Barker estate. His home was in Renaghmore, a 2-story house flanked by a fence and iron gates. He and his family emigrated to the United States in 1847. The school closed a few years later.

2. Grange Townland

The schoolmaster was James Miller, Protestant, 1824-1848. The Millers were a large Palatine family originally from the Southwell estate in Co. Limerick. The school was "a very good slated house" which cost 70 pounds. There were 75 children in the school: 62 belonged to the Established Church; 13 were Roman Catholics; 42 males, 33 females. This schoolhouse, on Steep's Hill, was in use until the 1960's. It is now a community center.

It was one of the schools supported by the Erasmus Smith Foundation. The trustees paid the Master 10 pounds. Lady Harriet Barker gave him 10 pounds, the rector paid 5 and the curate 2 per annum. The Master occupied a house and garden attached to the school, provided rent-free by Sir William. It was probably the oldest school in the parish.

The Erasmus Smith Foundation, initiated by Erasmus Smith, a London merchant, received a royal charter in 1660 for three free grammar schools. Its funds increased substantially during the 18th century, permitting grants to Trinity College, Dublin and many other schools. The one in Knockatoreen, Kilcooly Parish, on land owned by Barker, was listed as an Erasmus Smith school in the GPV of 1850. In 1852 an inspector for the Education Board noted that the children looked well and tidy but the school was nearly in ruins. There were only 42 pupils.

3. Springfield Townland

Mary Shins, Protestant, operated a small school in this Catholic townland. It was held in a thatched house worth 10 pounds. All the pupils were Roman Catholic, 1 male, 8 females. Her income was 6 pounds. Lady Harriet Barker paid the School Mistress 5 shillings a quarter for children who were learning needlework and 2/2 for those learning only to read and spell.

Kilkenny College

In Kilkenny City, St.John's Parish, about 10 miles distant, was Kilkenny College, founded in 1538 and operating today as a co-ed preparatory school. In 1826 it was run by William and Barbara Baillie, Protestants. It had 60 students, 50 of the Established Church, 2 Presbyterians, 1 other and 7 Roman Catholics. The Baillie's income was 140 pounds a year. The school was housed in a 3-story building worth 3,000 pounds. Many of the students prepared there for clerical studies at Trinity College. The 4th Sir William Barker prepared there for Trinity.

The Royal Commission recommended a National Board of Education to provide elementary education for Ireland. In the 1830's voluntary support declined as the National Education system came into being. Protestants continued to prefer their own schools. Those who attend national schools today may be excused from religious instruction.

Baptist Schools

The Baptist Irish Society's educational effort was initially directed toward native Irish Catholic children who received their education, if at all, in hedge schools. Since 2 million could not converse in English, the Baptists felt it was was important to teach the people to read in their own tongue. In 1817 a Bible in Irish was printed in Roman letters, in 1828 in Irish characters, Later this policy of teaching in Irish was amended and facility in English was encouraged.

The early schools circulated for a period of 6 to 18 mos., instruction gratis. Since few Protestants spoke Irish, schoolmasters were often Roman Catholics. Priests denounced the schools, which were well attended. The teachers used the Bible as a textbook. Spelling and reading lessons were first from the New Testament, then the Old. Scholars learned passages by rote. Reading the Scriptures without comment was contrary to Catholic principle.

In 1826 the Baptist Irish Society claimed 90 schools and about 8,000 students. The Royal Commission on Education reported 88 schools and 4,377 pupils for that year. In 1832-33 the Society showed 91 schools, 10,000 pupils and adult evening classes of 700.

Schools were generally held in cabins. Sometimes schoolhouses were fitted up by landlords on their estates. Usually the schoolmaster had another occupation to supplement his income. Many had little formal training. There is no record that Philip Smeltzer Jr. attended Kilkenny College or Trinity. The last Baptist school closed in 1865.

BAPTIST EVANGELISM

The Baptist Irish Society, formed in London in April 1814 to evangelize Ireland, was a revival of evangelical Calvinism. Only 5 of the 11 churches from Cromwell's time still survived. The Society employed itinerant evangelists, established circulating schools for adults and children and distributed Bibles and tracts. Scripture readers visited homes, particularly on Sundays, read the Scriptures where they were welcomed, prayed with the sick, conducted group meetings. One of the 19th century agents, reporting some success, referred to "my beloved Palatines."

There was a church in "Rhanemore" as early as 1817 and one at Clonmel in 1818. Their duration is uncertain. From 1838 to 1842 the church at Clonmel was served by Revs. Malarky, Farmer, Sharmand and Hoskins. Kilcooly Hills became an out-station of Clonmel in 1838. Philip Smeltzer, the Kilcooly schoolmaster, was also a lay preacher. In 1847, Rev. R.J. Wilson of the Clonmel church reported that it was declining, but that the Kilcooly church was flourishing.

A letter signed by 120 individuals of Kilcooly petitioned the Society to move Rev. Wilson to Kilcooly, 23 miles distant. Wilson agreed and moved there in Sept. 1847. The congregation met in rented quarters in Bonlea, between Peter and Henry Cooke. The Society's records show that Rev. Wilson was trying to buy property for a chapel and meeting house.

Between 1840 and 1845, 30 new Baptist churches were established in Ireland. Stations in the south included Limerick, Birr, occasional visits to Thurles, Waterford, Portlaw, Abbeyleix, Youghal and Cork. The famine swept away most of the stations and their records in the south. During the famine years the Society made substantial contributions to relief in food and clothing.

The church in Kilcooly Hills had 19 members in 1849. It had been decimated, like the other churches, by the Famine and emigration. Late in 1850 Rev. Wilson wrote about severe deprivations among the people in his district and estimated that 80% of the population was unemployed. He attracted a number of people to his congregation by his addresses on Religion in America and Canada. He reported that a number planned to emigrate the following spring. In 1851 the Kilcooly church and several others closed for economic reasons. Rev. Wilson himself may have emigrated since he disappeared from the Society's records.

Philip Smeltzer and his family emigrated to the United States in 1847 and there continued their Baptist affiliation. His daughter was baptised in a Baptist Church in New Jersey and married in a Baptist Church in Manhattan. His son-in-law founded a Baptist mission in Brooklyn, his son was a Baptist deacon and his nephew was ordained a Baptist minister.

Today only seven Baptist churches are listed in the Republic of Ireland: three in the Dublin area, Naas, Co. Kildare, Cork, Limerick and Waterford. Headquarters of the Baptist Historical Society are in Belfast, No. Ireland.

TITHE APPLOTMENT - 1826

In 1826 there were about 6,000 acres in Kilcooly Parish, of which more than 3,000 belonged to the Barker estate. Lessees in townlands with a number of Protestants: Renaghmore 8 (families), Commons (held in common) 47, Newpark 10, Kilcooly Abbey 10, Bawnleigh 32, Grange 3, Grange Middle (Knockatoreen) 8, Grange Crag 18. ## PEWHOLDERS 1829 - KILCOOLY PARISH CHURCH

Seats in the new church were allotted to parishioners by the Select Vestry 23 Nov. 1829. The raised pew to the left of the main body of the church was set aside for the Barker family. No. 1, a double pew, was reserved for the servants of Kilcooly Abbey. Duplicate names are different individuals. Those who shared a pew were often related or neighbors.

In 1829 there were 56 heads of families in the parish. In 1869 the church was disestablished. In 1872 there were 36 families, the congregation depleted by emigration, the Famine years and deaths of older members. There are no Smeltzers in the 1872 list of pewholders. The last in the parish was probably Mary Steep Smeltzer, widow of Philip II, who died in 1872.

Outgoing Tides

Early immigration to North America was largely for defense and trade. As the Napoleonic Wars came to a close, unemployment was widespread, soldiers no longer needed. Efforts to make colonists of disbanded soldiers were rarely successful. They lacked the skills needed for pioneer life and farming.

Ireland was densely populated, 90% dependent on primitive agriculture for a living. Some economists felt that colonies would benefit the entire Empire, relieve overcrowding, establish new markets for English goods, quiet agitators and build up a population that could defend the land.

Assisted emigration blurred the distinction between transportation as punishment for crime and the attempt to provide new opportunities for the poor. Landlords responsible for the poor by the Poor Laws were naturally eager to get rid of them. Many sincerely believed their tenants would be better off. Gradually the government withdrew financial assistance, allowing emigration to proceed on a voluntary basis.

THE LURE OF CANADA

Emigration to Canada was spurred in 1818 when fares on British ships, bound for British ports, were lowered. Those who landed in Quebec or Montreal usually went to Upper Canada or the United States. Passengers generally made their own arrangements with the ship's owner or the captain, later with an agent. Early immigrant sailing ships were fitted out with temporary wooden berths between decks, without portholes, for the voyage west. They were then torn out to accommodate cargo on the return trip. Steerage passengers provided their own food. Emigrants were advised not to take heavy luggage - simply wearing apparel and cooking utensils for the voyage. Any other articles were to be packed in a watertight case or trunk with a limit of 80-90 pounds. Average sailing time to Quebec was 44 days. Many ships left Ireland overcrowded; disease and death were commonplace. By mid-century stiffer laws were enacted to improve conditions as steam began to compete with sail.

The Canada Co., chartered in 1826, required payment in 6 installments within 5 years, accepting produce or labor on the roads. Crown Patents (deeds for Crown-owned land) were authorized in 1827 and 1831. One-third land fees were due in cash on receiving a location ticket, 1/3 when settling duties were finished and 1/3 on receipt of the Patent. Two years were allowed to build a house, clear the road in front and 3½ acres of each 100. Land could also be bought from private owners and mortgages arranged.

Roads - Keys to Canadian Settlements

The Smeltzers who went to Canada in the first part of the 19th century wanted to own land. The conditions of settlement were often as primitive as those 50 years earlier when they cleared the bush in the Kilcooly Hills.

Most of central and western Ontario was covered with thick forests. As surveyors' blazes marked off Townships, Concessions and Lots for settlement, colonists followed with their ox-carts, settling along the routes. Although efforts were made to lay out straight roads, original paths and trails that avoided swamps and hills contiunued to be used. Travel was largely by waterways and portages.

At first a new road was simply a blaze, then a footpath widened for a bridle path or ox-cart. The corduroy road was developed for the quantities of timber that could not be burned. Logs were laid side by side, not flattened, jolting carts and wagons with every turn of the wheel. Most visiting was done in winter, traveling by sled over the snow or frozen rivers. Snow filled the holes and froze the mud.

A road was cut through the forest to join the new settlements of Guelph and Goderich in 1827-28 by the Canada Co. At first it was simply a trail. New settlers walked in with their ox-carts, camped out at night. Stumps two or three feet high were left standing in the middle of the road. By the late 1830's it was wide enough for wagons to pass over it, carrying immigrants from Hamilton to Goderich. The Huron Road was largely mud or corduroy until the middle of the century.

Another early colonization road was Hurontario Street, n.w. from Port Credit through the townships of Toronto, Chinguacousy and Caledon, near Orangeville, thence to Collingwood. The Garafraxa Road (Rankin's Road) from Oakville to Owen Sound, begun in 1837, went through the townships of Trafalgar, Esquesing, Erin and Garafraxa. The Sydenham Road from Arthur in Wellington Co. to Owen Sound was blazed in 1842.

The road from Kincardine, by way of Galt, was mud and corduroy westward to Stratford, Hunter's Corners (Seaforth) and Goderich. Ashfield, Huron and Kincardine were still covered by bush. Only a surveyor's blaze marked the 18 miles from Belfast to Kincardine.

Colonists were required to maintain roads which fronted on their lands. Unsettled stretches of road were usually in poor condition. The first winter was spent making a clearing, then slashing and burning in the spring to plant a crop. Provisions and flour mills might be miles away. Often men left the women to farm while they earned money for the winter.

Turnpikes or toll roads, laid out from 1825 to 1850, had planked or gravel surfaces. (Turnpiking meant ploughing the road on each side and throwing the earth into the center). Tolls, collected every 4 or 5 miles, were to be used by the companies to keep the roads in condition.

Various Smeltzer families followed these roads, settling in the townships opened up by them, moving north and west of the Gore District, Peel and Halton Cos., to the Huron Tract. When John Smeltzer arrived from Prince Edward Island about 1840 he became a tollkeeper for more than 10 years before moving to Garafraxa and becoming a farmer.

Goderich Township - the Huron Tract

Cheap land on the Huron Tract encouraged many earlier settlers in southern Ontario to sell out and move west. Goderich Twp., following the Huron Road, was laid out by surveyors in 1828. The land was divided into long narrow blocks, 1/4 mile road frontage, 5/8 mile in depth, in a mathematical grid, disregarding natural features. Canada Co. prices varied according to the type of land and location in the county. The company usually sold every other lot so that a settler could later purchase an additional lot.

The first obligation was clearing and fencing, except for removing stumps, to get ready for a 10-acre crop. The first house, usually of logs, 16 x 24, and a barn 24 x 40, were constructed by the farmer. Essentials included a yoke of oxen, cows, horses, clothing, cooking utensils, cutlery and farm equipment. Plowing, planting and harvesting were from April to November.

Although applications were made earlier, the first Canadian grant in Goderich was in 1841, on a 10-year lease. It was not settled in large numbers until 1844. Most of those who applied for Concessions X and XI (1839 Canada Co.) appear to be Kilcooly neighbors.

Sombra Twp. - Lambton Co.

The site of Sombra Twp., on the banks of the St.Clair River opposite Michigan, USA, was surveyed in 1820 by Sir Peregrine Maitland, Lt. Gov. of Upper Canada. He called the heavily wooded area "Sombra," Spanish for shade. The land had been sold by Chippewa Indians in 1796 to King George III for 800 pounds sterling, taken in goods, including blankets, tobacco pipes and black silk handkerchiefs! The earliest settlers were French from Detroit. Many Americans crossed the border. The Sydenham and St.Clair Rivers afforded convenient transportation, as did a road built along the banks of the St. Clair in the 1840's. Cordwood cut along the banks fueled the river steamers. Agriculture was the leading industry until gas and oil were discovered in this century. In 1836, the year before Paul Smeltzer arrived, there were 614 people living in the 15 Concessions in Sombra, then the most heavily populated township in the county.

SENECA COUNTY, NEW YORK

Thirty years before Michael Smelzer arrived in Seneca Co. (1819), the area between Lakes Seneca and Cayuga was virtually a wilderness, covered with hard and soft woods. Deer, wolves, bear and panther abounded. In 1779, the Seneca Indians, who had aided the British in the American Revolution, were driven from their lands. A few continued to harrass the frontier until 1789. The United States concluded a peace treaty with them in 1784 and the Onondagas in 1788. A tract was set aside as a Military Trust for discharged soldiers. The land was surveyed into 25 townships, most given names from Roman history. Indian paths were improved for roads. A few cabins appeared.

One of the earliest settlers was Silas Halsey of Southampton, Long Island, who "went west" in 1792, settled at Ovid. There he started an apple orchard with seeds from the Indians, planted vegetable gardens and corn fields. Food fish from the lake, maple syrup and wild plums added variety to the diet. The fertile soil, water power and splendid scenery attracted older settlers from Maryland, Connecticut, Long Island and New Jersey. Girls in new families were in great demand as wives. By 1819 many small towns were flourishing. A glass factory established in 1817 provided glass windows for homes.

The area boasted lumber and grist mills, taverns, doctors and lawyers. The first Masonic Lodge in the vicinity, James Lodge, was organized at Waterloo in 1818. The first Methodist Church was built in Townsendville in 1810. The village of Lodi, where Michael Smelzer settled, split off from Covert in 1826. In 1835 it had a population of 1,772.

The Erie Canal (1817-1825)

A water route to the west, connecting Lake Ontario and Lake Erie, had been talked of since the 18th century. When the project was finally approved, several thousand "bog-trotters," largely indentured Irish immigrants, were sent from New York City. They worked with pick and shovel and did the blasting. Construction was begun at Rome and extended in both directions. In the middle of May 1819, the diggers moved into the Montezuma marshes, west of Syracuse. June and July were unusually hot and humid. Thousands of men contracted malaria, ague and typhoid; hundreds died. This was the summer that J. Smelser, a recent arrival from Ireland, died of a fever while working on the road at Hector Falls.

Immigrants welcomed this route west and traveled by barge with their household goods and animals to Lake Erie. There connecting steamboats carried them to Michigan and Wisconsin. Arnold Smeltzer arrived in Seneca Co. in 1831, continued on to eastern Michigan in 1837.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

This island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence was called Ile de St. Jean by Jacques Cartier who sighted it in June 1534. In the 17th century it was heavily forested, the soil thin and sandy. The Micmac Indians used it as a summer camping ground. The first permanent French settlement was in 1719 on land granted to Comte de Saint Pierre. The Acadians preferred the tidal marshes of the Bay of Fundy in Nova Scotia to clearing the island forests and the settlement failed. Gradually more Acadians arrived to grow grain, raise cattle, sheep and pigs. The 1763 treaty ending the French and Indian War transferred the island to the British.

British efforts to colonize the island began the following year. Surveyors laid out 66 townships of approximately 20,000 acres each. Annual rents were set at 6, 4 and 2 shillings per 100 acres. Land grants were made to absentee landlords. Settlements began in 1770, but were delayed by the American Revolution. Tory refugees who arrived from the American Colonies were generally dissatsfied. All but a hundred left.

The island was renamed Prince Edward Island in 1799 to avoid confusion with St. John, New Brunswick. The population in 1798 was 4,372, largely Acadian, Highland Scots and a few from the former American Colonies. Travel was by water and trails, sleds in winter. Roads that did exist were mounded higher in the center to form gutters at the sides; corduroy construction was used through swampy areas. Cattle grazed in the forest, fending for themselves. It was described as a heap of sand, rock and swamp!

Most of the early 19th century settlers were brought out by proprietors from Scotland and Ireland. Colonists had come in the hope of owning land. When they were unable to do so they often squatted on other land. Most were poor, inexperienced with clearing forests and unused to the climate. Farming methods were primitive. Houses were of logs, thatched with bark or rough boards, floors made of packed clay. Deep lots with small frontage isolated farms.

The only Smeltzer known to have settled in Prince Edward Island was John Smeltzer (1803-1871) and his wife Charlotte Switzer, both born in Ireland. Five children were born there between 1833 and 1839. A son David, born on Lot 19 Richmond in 1835 was baptised in the Richmond Parish C. of E. Church. John was probably a renter. His name does not appear on the Index to Land Leases or Land Conveyances (1769-1872). Richmond is on the north shore of the island, close to Malpeque Bay. It was named in honor of the 3rd Duke of Richmond and Lennox. John probably left the island about 1840.

Tracing the ownership of property in PEI is difficult. In 1767 applications for land grants to proprietors were made in writing, then reasons heard orally by a Board of Commissioners. Favor was shown to military and career men, politicians and civil servants. Assignments of townships were determined by lottery. On 23 July the entire island was divided among approximately 100 individuals, including many speculators. Lot 19, on which John Smeltzer lived, was awarded to Walter Patterson, Esq., Capt. and John Patterson. During the next 10 years approximately one quarter of the lands changed hands.

In 1805 the population was 7,000; by 1841 it had risen to 47,000. Newcomers wanted to own the land rather than pay rent. Renters who improved their property risked losing it to others. It was Ireland all over again on a small scale. Spouses of several Smeltzers in Ontario were born in PEI.

Accessible only by ferry, the island today is a popular summer resort, known to many as the setting for Lucy Maude Montgomery's novel Anne of Green Gables. Warmed by the Gulf Stream as it turns towards Europe, the dune beaches on the north are surprisingly temperate and add to the island's charm.

ENGLAND AND INDUSTRY

Life for the Irish-Palatine was changing in the last quarter of the 19th century. Most of the prosperous farmers had left before or soon after the Famine of 1848. Those who remained often went into service or took laboring jobs. Some were employed as grooms. Ireland was still a poor country, wracked by disturbances and lagging in industrialization.

Many Irishmen had been accustomed to going to England to work for part of the year. After the Famine, even more poured into Liverpool to work on the docks or in industry. Years of costly strikes in the 20th century strangled the port.

St. Helens, Lancashire (now Merseyside)

According to legend, the hamlet of St. Helens, 12 miles from Liverpool, derived its name from Helen Birchall, the Lady Superior of Windleshaw Abbey, founded about 1435 and referred to as Eleyn's Chapel in 1552. In the 17th century, as lands were enclosed, coal-mining brought new activity to the area.

Growth of the port of Liverpool in the 18th century was the primary reason for St. Helens' development. Demand for coal increased and in 1740 a turnpike was extended to Prescot. The Sankey Canal, begun in 1763, provided cheap water transportation and encouraged new industries, particularly glass and copper, to locate in St. Helens. John Wesley, the famous Methodist evangelist and mentor of the Palatines in Ireland visited St. Helens in 1782.

By the 19th century, St. Helens was becoming an industrial town. George Stevenson held trials for the first steam passenger engine here in 1829. In 1830 the first steam railway in the county linked Liverpool, St. Helens and Manchester. The canal and the railways brought raw materials to St. Helens' industries and delivered their products to Liverpool cheaply. After the repeal of the glass tax in 1845, expansion was even more rapid. Chemical works produced bleaches and chlorine for textile mills, caustic soda for soap plants. Coal-mining continued an important industry.

The four townships that engulfed the original hamlet were unprepared. Jerry-built slums along unpaved streets, lit by lanterns hung from trees, were the only housing for workers. Chemical discharges from plants polluted the air. In the first 50 years of the 19th century the population more than tripled. Improvements came slowly. In 1868, with a population of nearly 45,000, St. Helens became a municipal borough. Since 1974 it has been Merseyside Metropolitan District No. 3.

In the early 1870's, three Smeltzer brothers, John, Daniel and Robert, went to St. Helens. They were from Co. Meath, sons of William Smeltzer, a carpenter and Mary Bible. In spite of industrial blight, England may have offered more opportunity than Ireland. The family's togetherness instinct was strong. All lived close together in neighboring houses and streets. Daniel's son became a skilled ironworker and engraver. Outraged by working conditions, he joined the engineering association. As a result, he lost his situation and was rejected wherever he applied in the industrial north. In 1912 he took his family to Northern Ireland.

Today the suburbs of St. Helens are covered with attractive homes, usually semi-detached and tasteful terrace (row) houses built by St. Helens Council. Carefully tended lawns and flower gardens are everywhere.

Alien Suspicions

When World War I burst over England, hatred of everything German was raised to a fever pitch, as in Canada, Australia and the United States. Some Smeltzers, to their dismay, were suspected of being enemy aliens or sympathizers because of their German-sounding name. Others claimed they were of Dutch origin. For centuries the Rhineland had been the battleground of Europe, its peaceful people buffeted between France and Germany. Swallowed up by the unification of the German Empire under Prussia, they lost their special identity. In World War II the same hatred of anything German returned. Small wonder that many families buried their Palatine origin. After all, they had been Irish for over 200 years.

DAKOTA TERRITORY, USA

Restlessness was sweeping across the settled areas of Upper Canada and the eastern United States in the 1870's. Cheap land in the Great Plains held out a promise of "greener pastures." Soil was becoming depleted in many parts of the east while populations were growing. The westward thrust of the railroads would make it possible for farmers to ship their produce to urban markets and for settlers to obtain supplies.

Many farmers in the Huron Tract in Ontario were selling out to newcomers and moving to Manitoba, which had become a province in 1870. Catherine Smeltzer and James Black, living in Bruce Co., were caught up in the move to go west. In 1870 most of the best land around Winnipeg and the Upper Red River Valley of the North had been taken up. High duties were levied on American farm implements and most livestock was imported. The nomadic life of the French and Indian fur traders and trappers, controlled by the Hudson's Bay Co., was ending. The new settlers cleared the land and attempted to recreate the social life they had known back east. Conflicts with the Ottawa government and among the diverse cultures were frequent.

Some who started out for Winnipeg changed their minds, preferring the climate of Dakota. The Dakota Territory had been created in 1801. The Sioux Indians, south and west, had been settled on reservations. In the northeast corner, the Chippewa and Cree, who had intermarried with traders (Metis), presented no problem to white settlers. The Territorial Legislature was eager to increase the population to qualify for statehood. The Northern Pacific Railroad had been granted millions of acres, including 10 million in Dakota, to encourage westward expansion. In 1879 the line went bankrupt and wanted to dispose of its holdings.

Clamor for western land had resulted in the Homestead Act of 1862. It offered a quarter section (160 acres) of land to any native-born citizen or immigrant who had taken out "first papers" (citizenship intent). He was required to build a house of some sort and live on the land for 5 years. During that time he was expected to make improvements. After 5 years he could acquire title by paying the land office fee of $4 to $8. If he wished to gain a mortgageable title more promptly, he could make a cash payment within 6 months: $1.25 per acre for land 40 miles or more from the railroad or $2.50 for land within that distance.

A qualified settler could also acquire land through the Timber Culture Act, paying an entry fee of $14 for 160 acres. He was required to break 5 acres in each of the first two years and to plant this with trees - cuttings or seedlings; cottonwoods were most popular. If at the end of 8 years he had 6,750 healthy trees growing on his 10 acres he received title to the land upon payment of another fee of $4.

By the 1880's, the Dakota boom was in full swing. Several overzealous agents promoted the Red River Valley of the North as the "Nile of North America." A technological improvement made it possible to produce soft, white flour from North Dakota's hard wheat. World prices fell in a few years and weather conditions often wiped out a crop. Farmers who were several days' trip from markets might receive less than it cost to produce the crop.

Some immigrants from western Ontario came to Dakota by way of Sarnia and Windsor. Passenger, freight and mail routes to Winnipeg were still largely via Detroit, Chicago, St. Paul and Fargo. Geology (the Canadian Shield) had presented a major challenge to transcontinental travel. An early route west, which went around Lake Superior, required 17 changes. The Canadian National Railway reached Winnipeg in Oct. 1885.

The Red River of the North forms a part of the boundary between North Dakota and Minnesota. It flows north into Manitoba where it empties into Lake Winnipeg. Before the completion of the CPR, the "Manitoba Road," a branch line of the Great Northern, was the supply line via Dakota.

Canadians and second generation Americans from the east, as well as Scandinavians and immigrants from Europe, poured into the territory. Travel by immigrant train was slow, stops frequent to exercise farm animals of the settlers or for passengers to shovel snow that blocked the tracks. In spring there was a danger of flood from the Great Lakes; in summer, unbearable heat and mosquitoes. Most tried to arrive in March in time for spring planting. Many settlers came through Neche, Pembina Co., just south of the Canadian border.

Farms were widely separated tracts rather than clustered in agricultural villages. The silence of the prairies was broken only by the ever-present, howling wind. Life in towns that sprang up to the south, incorporating the amenities of the east, was far different from life on the farms. Dakota winters were long and cold, summers sizzling. Temperatures might range from -60° to 120°, usually -30° to -40° in midwinter and below freezing from Nov. through Mar. Willows, birches and other small trees along the streams were useful for tent poles but no defense against blizzards.

Cavalier Co., ND, where James and Catherine Black farmed, contains a number of small streams, branches of the Little Pembina or So. Pembina River. Five hundred feet higher than the valley, much of the land had to be cleared of stones before plowing and planting. The town of Elkwood consisted mainly of a school, store and Post Office, and a couple of houses. Churches and cemeteries were several miles away. The railroad arrived in 1887.

North Dakota was admitted to the Union in 1889 as the 39th state. Vital records for the late 19th century are incomplete. A territorial census was taken in 1885. The federal census of 1890 was destroyed by fire.

By 1900 many Dakotans were moving on again to the goldfields of the Klondike or Nome or the Province of Saskatchewan. The Blacks chose Western Australia. Mt.Carmel Dam and Recreation Area, built some years ago on NE¼-29-163-59, flooded a part of West Hope Twp. The land owned by the Blacks is probably under water.

Geographic Note: Cavalier, the county seat of Pembina Co., is approximately 6 miles west of Hamilton, 161N, Range 4W. Langdon is the county seat of Cavalier Co. Elkwood is a hamlet within Hope Twp. (E. & W.) near Langdon.

AUSTRALIA - THE DISTANT HOPE

Rural Ireland after the Famine faced many of the same problems it had in the years before. Farmers were still unable to buy the land they tilled and their sons could not obtain land of their own. In Ontario, to which many had gone earlier in the century, good cheap farmland was no longer available. Meanwhile, new convict settlements in Australia were ending and free settlers encouraged. Laborers were in demand in the cities, where half the population lived, and farmers were needed to develop the land away from the coast. Men outnumbered women and single girls who went as servants soon found husbands.

Many of the new settlers were from the British Isles. While they remained English in speech and culture, they developed a special character of their own. They were strong and independent. The 1880's in Australia were a decade of bank failures, bankruptcies and maritime strikes. Many dreams were delayed. Farmers and stockmen endured the harships of pioneer life into the 20th century. The breaking of old ties left most Irish-Palatines unaware of their heritage. They became totally committed to Australia.

Early History

The west coast of Australia had been sighted by Portugese and Dutch navigators as early as the 17th century. William de Vlamingh, a Dutch captain, landed near the present Fremantle in 1697, not far from Cottesloe Beach and explored the lower part of the Swan River. He reported that the country seemed worthless. More than 130 years passed before it was suggested by a British captain for a colony. In 1770, Capt. James Cook took possession of the east coast in the name of George III at Botany Bay. By 1829 Tasmania and the entire continent had been proclaimed a dependency of the United Kingdom.

After the American Revolution, English criminals could no longer be sent to the American Colonies. As English prisons began to bulge, the botanist who had been with Capt. Cook suggested Botany Bay as a site for a convict settlement. The first prison ships, carrying 759 convicts, were sent there in 1787. Many of those who were sent were guilty of minor infractions; some are said to have committed offenses deliberately to escape poverty at home. Convicts were often assigned to build roads or work for free settlers as servants or farm laborers, receiving only subsistence.

The first small settlements on the continent had been situated to supply passing ships and to prevent the French from gaining a foothold on the eastern coast. Mountain barriers and lack of inland waterways made travel costly and difficult. Wool and whale oil were sent to England in returning convict ships. Railways developed slowly from 1854, dependent on imported rail and rolling stock. The opening of the Suez Canal and improved navigation instruments shortened the voyage from England. Conditions in steerage were improved by law and fast clipper ships cut the voyage to an average of 80 days.

Queensland

By 1824 new convict camps were needed for second offenders. Brisbane, a few miles from the coast, on the Brisbane River, was opened as a prison site in 1825. The river had been discovered by sea in 1823 by John Oxley. A rugged mountain range to the west, the Great Dividing Range, cut off access to a fertile plain. In 1828 Cunningham discovered a way through, called it Cunningham's Gap.

The sending of new convicts ceased in 1840 and in 1842 the area was thrown open to free settlers. Australia was experiencing a wool boom at the time and the first squatters reached Darling Downs. These free settlers simply drove their flocks in the tracks of the explorers and squatted on Crown land. At first they were allowed to occupy the land without government approval, later under a system of squatters' leases. Until 1859 Queensland was part of New South Wales. In the 1850's and 1860's it experienced a great surge of population when gold was discovered. The sugar industry began in the 1860's and continues to be one of the major exports. Rich in coal and minerals, the state ranks mining as a major industry.

Land in Queensland, then a frontier state, was generally cheaper than in older settlements. A decision was made to sell it at inflated prices and use the revenues to subsidize immigration. Queensland was the only state that subsidized immigration from Great Britain after 1873 and continued the practice until 1919. The plan was designed to attract laborers needed in the towns. Assisted immigrants would be obliged to work for a number of years before acquiring enough cash to purchase land.

In this century, Queensland's beautiful beaches along the Sun Coast to the north, the Gold Coast to the south and its sub-tropical climate have encouraged the growth of tourism.

Western Australia

Perth, 3,000 miles from the east coast and separated by mountain ranges and deserts, was founded by free settlers in 1830. In 1822, Capt. James Stirling, exploring the west coast for a naval and trading station, went up the Swan Valley as far as Guildford and considered it an ideal site for a colony. Another expedition in 1826 under Major Edmund Lockyer was sent out to establish a military outpost at King George's Sound. Ultimately Albany became Western Australia's major port in the 19th century. Capt. Fremantle arrived in 1829 and took possession of "New Holland." The Swan River Colony was the first free settlement in Australia.

The first settlers included land-hungry farmers, laborers protesting low wages, paupers fleeing unemployment, soldiers on half-pay and some moneyed gentlemen. Many lacked practical knowledge of agriculture and were ill-equipped to cope with the climate. Swan River remained one of the most isolated settlements. Exploration of the interior was not undertaken until well into the 20th century.

Meanwhile land was surveyed for the orderly opening up of new properties. The Gold Rush of 1898 to the north brought an influx of new immigrants. In 1890 the first elections were held. Only property owners were permitted to vote. In 1893 all males over 21 were enfranchised and women in 1899. In 1901 Western Australia ceased to be a Crown Colony and became a member of the Federation of Australian States.

The present city of Perth is situated on the Swan River about 12 miles from the port of Fremantle, also on the Swan. The river takes its name from the flocks of black swans that make their home there. Its curving shoreline and broad bay afford miles of waterfront for sailing enthusiasts. Summers are usually hot and dry, winters green and mild, frequently rainy. Most of the older homes are one-story with shaded verandahs front and back to permit cool breezes ("the Fremantle doctor") to sweep through. Flower gardens are usually part of every home. Wildflowers grow in abundance. The early settlers soon found the familiar flowers of home were not suited to the climate and soil and turned to native and semi-tropical flora. Wine grapes have been planted since the earliest settlements. Kings Park, on a bluff saved through the efforts of Sir John Forrest, an early surveyor, overlooks the city and its growing skyline of high-rises.

New South Wales & Tasmania

Early navigators saw nothing of interest in Australia's coast - no exotic products to transport, no opportunities to trade. The vast oceans and howling westerlies made navigation a hazard. In 1779, Capt. Cook followed the east coast for some days, eventually finding anchorage at Botany Bay, a few miles south of the present city of Sydney. The choice of Botany Bay for a penal settlement could have been influenced by the tall trees he thought might be used for masts and the long flax for ropes and sailcloth. Both were failures.

In the 1880's, Sydney was a port of call on routes from Europe to Asia and the Pacific and a base for trade with islands in the South Pacific. Hobart Town, Van Dieman's Land (Tasmania), Australia's largest port in 1820, was also a convict settlement. In the 1830's and 1840's, Hobart was a thriving whaling port. Since the whaling industry employed only free men, it attracted families of whalers as permanent residents and others in related trades of provisioning and shipbuilding. When gold was discovered in California and then in Australia in 1851, men soon deserted the whaling ships. Transportation of convicts to New South Wales ceased in 1840 and to Tasmania in 1852.

Convicts were used to build a network of roads over the Blue Mts. to the plains on the other side. There sheep and cattle runs soon developed, discouraging the growth of inland towns. Wool became a major export, surpassed by gold in 1860. Immigration was at its height in 1865.

In the early years, Britain was more interested in controlling the seas than in developing the interior of the continent. In the 19th century, commodities which could be sold in world markets stimulated the development and economy of Victoria and New South Wales. The price of land was made artificially high and the revenues used to subsidize immigration.

Smeltzer Descendants in Australia

The first Smeltzer to settle permanently in Australia was Philip Smeltzer, born in 1836 in Van Dieman's Land while his father was garrisoned there with the 21st Reg. of Fusilliers. When Philip's father (also Philip) retired from the British Army in 1845, the family returned to Woolavington, Somerset. At 20, young Philip set out in 1857 for New South Wales as an assisted immigrant, became a vigneron (wine grower) in Allandale, NSW, married and fathered four daughters.

In 1875 Susannah Smeltzer, eldest daughter of Thomas

Smeltzer and Alice Baldwin of Co. Tipperary, made the trip from India with her husband George Taylor and their four young children. He had retired from the British Army and selected Western Australia for their future home. After WW II, a great-nephew, Lt. Com. Robert Beamish, transferred to the Australian Navy and moved his family to Nowra.

Next to emigrate was Thomas Smeltzer, born in 1857 in Co. Kildare, son of William Smeltzer and Mary Bible. In 1883 he set out for Brisbane alone. His first wife died. Children from his second marriage constitute a strong Smeltzer clan.

In the 20th century, Catherine Smeltzer, a sister of Susannah, her husband James Black and their four grown children, weary of North Dakota winters, went to Western Australia in 1902. They settled in the newly opened Katanning District north of Albany. From Susannah and Catherine have come hundreds of Australian descendants: Taylor, Wylde, Black and Moore.

An unplaced immigrant is Charles Smeltzer, age 32, who arrived from London in 1911 with his wife Gwendoline and infant daughter to Brisbane.

EASTWARD TO RUSSIA

The 18th century was an age of emigration. In the German states especially, the common man was fleeing from devastating wars, military conscription, foreign occupation, political turmail, crop failures, high taxes, lack of living space and often religious persecution. While most looked to the west, thousands turned to the east. By 1770 5,000 Germans had migrated to the Lower Volga region and established 100 colonies.

There may have been Smeltzers among the German emigrants. Some of the names: Schmelcher, Schmelzle, Schmetzer, bear a strong resemblance. No attempt has been made to connect these with the Irish-Palatines. They simply illustrate the probable involvment of the clan in population upheavals.

Russia in 1763 had many regions rich in minerals suitable for manufacturing and close to the sea for trade. German-born Catherine II (Empress 1762-96) wanted western settlers as a buffer against Asiatic tribes and to spread western culture. A proclamation was distributed to all European countries, but most successfully in Germany, devastated by the Seven Years War. Agents were paid a premium for each family recruited. People could choose where they wished to settle and take an oath of allegiance according to their own religious rites. An edict by the Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire in 1769 forbade immigration to foreign countries (like Russia) which had no relations with his Empire.

Catherine offered favorable terms. Farmers were exempt from taxes for 30 years, tradesmen for 5. Loans were offered for building factories, especially new industries; loans for houses, farm implements and livestock were tax-free for 10 years. Villages could manage their own internal affairs. Free practice of religion, the right to build churches, maintain priests, educate children in their own schools, in their own language were assured. Men could not be drafted into military or civil service. Land could be owned and inherited. Immigration was halted temporarily during the Russo-Turkish War and the Partition of Poland. Catherine won the right to sail on the Black Sea, acquired Crimea and Bessarabia. New cities, including Odessa, were founded.

Catherine's son Paul I continued the rights and privileges of the immigrants and in 1804 sent agents to south Germany to recruit new colonists. Each family received a lot for a house and garden and 160 acres of farmland. Tens of thousands, suffering from the Napoleonic Wars, moved to the Black Sea region. The Confederation of the Rhine had committed 63,000 troops to Napoleon from Württemberg, Baden and Hesse. Only a handful returned from Russia. Alsace was ceded to France and the men conscripted into the French Army.

Earlier emigrants to Russia wrote back of unrestricted opportunity, ability to buy land, freedom from taxes, freedom of religion and exemption from military service. The usual route was via the Danube, by barge from Ulm to Vienna, then by boat to Galatz, on the Rumanian-Russian border. The trip to the border often took six weeks. Many died on the way. Transportation was free from the border to their destination in Russia.

Alexander I, grandson of Catherine and related to the ruling house of Württemberg, continued to encourage colonization. The new immigrants began the colonization of South Russia from Bessarabia to the South Caucasus. In 1876 Tsar Alexander II repudiated their military exemption and many Germans left the country if they could. A large number settled on the western plains of the United States and Canada.

Karl Stumpp lists these Russian settlers in considerable detail, their villages of origin and places of settlement. Names include a number of Sperlings (Sparling) and Schweitzers (Switzer), familiar Irish-Palatine names. e.g.

Schmelcher, Katherine & Heinrich, from Walladorf/Heidelberg to Neu Salzfeld, Odessa (pg. 427)

Schmetzer, Katherine, 29, of Erstatten-Backanag-Württemberg in 1817 to the Black Sea region (pg. 247)

Schmelzle, Bartholemew & wife Maria, 20, son of Bartholemeus and brother Franz to a Protestant village in Feodosia-Crimea in 1803 (pg. 922)

GERMAN SMELTZERS AROUND THE WORLD

Origin of the Name

A Smeltzer (Schmeltzer) may have been an ironworker in the 14th century and so took his occupation "smelter," a founder or worker in molten metals, as a surname. The origin has little to do with his occupation four centuries later. Most of those in the Rhine Valley were farmers or vineyard workers. The most likely coat-of-arms appears to be from Bavaria. No line of descent has been proved for the Irish-Palatines.

Given Names

German Christian names can be misleading. In the 18th century all the sons in the family were often given the same first name, probably as protection of a saint or to honor an important person. Johann was especially popular with Smeltzers. The girls frequently had the same first name, usually Maria or Anna. The middle or "call" name was the important one. Sometimes the actual first name was used in legal records, the census etc., the middle name in family records. Johannes (John) could be both a first name and a call name; Johann was apt to be a common family first name. Hans (Johnnie) might become John. Instead of looking for "John Smeltzer," perhaps the researcher should be looking for Philip, Peter, Michael, etc.

Nova Scotia

The first Smeltzer to arrive in Canada came directly from the Palatinate. Phillip Schmeltzer, 23 and single, arrived in Halifax in 1752. He was probably Georg Phillip of Sandhofen, near Mannheim, who emigrated 5 Mar. 1752 to the "New Land." Nova Scotia was considerably less desirable than the American Colonies, but offered assisted passage. Hundreds of Smeltzers and allied families in Lunenberg Twp., Mahone Bay and other parts of Nova Scotia are descended from Phillip Smeltzer and his wife Apollonia Graf.

Markham Twp., York Co., Ont.

The next Schmeltzer to settle in Canada was Johann Schmeltzer, a south German. John had been recruited for the Berczy settlement in the Genesee region of New York State.

In 1794 Berczy moved his colony to Markham Twp., north of York (Toronto), then being built as the new capital of Upper Canada. Johann died a year after arriving in Canada, leaving a young son, John Jr. John served with the British Army in the War of 1812, married Mary Puterbaugh. They are the ancestors of hundreds of Smelsers in Vaughan and King Twp., York Co., Grey Co. and other parts of Ontario.

Haldimand Co., Ontario

A third group, including Frederick (Godfrey) and Valentin Smelser appear in the census for Haldimand Co. Godfrey arrived about 1833, Valentin about 1856. They were from Rhenish Prussia, an area which extended north from Mainz through the Rhine Valley and included parts of Alsace and the Saar. The territory had been ceded to Prussia by the Congress of Vienna in 1815 at the close of the Napoleonic Wars.

American Colonies

A number of Schmeltzers (Schmelzer) who arrived in Philadelphia prior to the American Revolution have been documented:

JOHANNES SCHMELTZER 25 Sept. 1732 on the Royal Judith, Robert Turpin, Master, from Rotterdam & Plymouth. Johannes was born in 1706 in Carlsruhe, Baden, married Elizabeth Korr in PA in 1834. They had 7 children.

JOHANN PHILLIP SCHMELTZER 19 Sept. 1738 on The Thistle, John Wilson, Master, from Rotterdam & Plymouth.

CHRISTOF SCHMELTZER arrived on the same ship, same year. (Kaiserlautern files in the Pfalz)

JOHANN MICHAEL SCHMELTZER was in the Carolinas in 1738 (Kaiserlautern files). He may be the Michael who arrived on The Thistle in 1738. He was a son of Peter (who died before 1728) of Oberbesbach (Homburg); he married Maria Bracher of Rimschweiler, Zweibrücken.

WENDEL SCHMELZER arrived 7 Oct. 1749 on the Leslie.

JOHANN ADAM SCHMELTZER 15 Aug. 1750 on the Royal Union, Clement Richardson, Master, from Rotterdam & Cowes. An ancestor (1734-1796) of Smeltzers in "Asters at Dusk."

VALTIN SCHMELTZER, brother of Johann Adam, arrived at the same time. He was from St. Inglebert.

ANDREAS SCHMELTZER 5 Sept. 1751 on the Shirley, James Allen, Master, from Rotterdam & Orkney, Scotland.

JOHANN PETER SCHMELTZER 14 Sept. 1751 on the St. Andrew, Capt. James Abercrombie, Master, from Rotterdam & Cowes.

JOHN GOTTFRIED SCHMELTZER 25 Sept. 1751 on the Phoenix, John Spurrier, Master, from Rotterdam & Plymouth

Rotterdam, at the mouth of the Rhine, was the usual port of exit from the Palatinate. Ships from continental ports were required to touch at a British port before proceeding across the Atlantic. Most of the early immigrants came through the port of Philadelphia. Those who arrived in Philadelphia spread west through Pennsylvania, north and south to Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina. Immigration declined substantially during the American Revolution. Many more Smeltzers arrived during the 19th century.

No Smeltzers have been found among the immigrants who were sent to the Hudson Valley in 1709. Nor have any been found at New Bern, Carolina, to which two groups were sent in 1710 from London. Few of these settlers survived.

Russia

In the late 18th century, Empress Catherine II of Russia offered generous terms to European settlers and attracted a number of Germans to Bessarabia and the Crimea. Tsars continued to recruit colonists in the early 19th century. Some spellings are akin to Smeltzer. A Smeltzer widow in upper New York State said her husband was of Lithuanian origin. In 1876 Tsar Alexander II repudiated the Germans' exemption from military service. Many settled in northwest Canada and western United States.

On the Continent

Ernest Thode, a specialist in German historical research, has found Schmeltzers in the Zweibrücken area in the latter part of the 18th century. They are too late to connect directly with Peter and Christopher, who left the Pfalz in 1709.

George Schmeltzer, the master baker in Zweibrücken, had a son Johann Philip Schmeltzer, born 28 July 1752, who was a pastor in Bergzabern in 1776. Other Schmeltzers were Paul August, 31, in the 1776 Pfalz-Zweibrücken allegiance list; George Schmeltzer and his son George, 18, Zweibrücken; Peter Schmeltzer, a citizen in Eisenbach. The names Philip, Peter and Paul were popular among the Irish-Palatines. The Irish immigrants may have lived in the vicinity of Oberbesbach, Rimschweiler, Otweiler or Zweibrücken.

Who's Who

How to Find Your Ancestor

A modification of the Henry system is used; a series of numbers denotes an individual's relation to earlier generations. The earliest proved progenitor of each major branch has been given a letter (A, B, etc.) Some letters and numbers vary from The Smeltzers of Kilcooly because of new information or extended families. There is no significance to the alphabetical order of the groups. Spouses are shown () in the index. Female Smeltzers have been treated in the same way as males and lines continued through changes of surname. Infants who died young are included.

The letter "A," e.g., indicates the group. The first generation is #1. The first child is #11 (not eleven). The second child, in order of known or presumed birth, is #12 (not twelve.) Any number larger than 9 is in parenthesis (). Thus the 10th child of #1 is 1(10). Spellings for the same individual may vary in records and within the branch. Smeltzer, Smelser, Smelzer, Smelcer, Smelsor, Smeltzar, Smelson are grouped together in the index.

Example:

C Philip Smeltzer Sr. (Dulmage)
C1 John Smeltzer Sr. (Finlay)
C16 John Smeltzer Jr. (Case)
C165 Chester Smeltzer (Winters)
C1652 Marjorie Smeltzer (Stevenot) I AM HERE
C16521 Margot Stevenot (Arter, Graettinger)
C165211 Mary Elizabeth Arter
C165212 John S. Graettinger
C165213 Anna Graettinger

Canadian Schmeltzers, Smelsers, etc. who emigrated directly from Germany, are grouped in PART IV.

m Elizabeth --
Newpark, Co. Tipperary

Whether Paul was a son or grandson of the immigrant Peter is not certain. Known freeholders from the Limerick period were Peter, Philip and Paul. In 1759 there was a Peter in Ballingrane and a Peter in Killiheen. They may be the same, or father and son. In the 1766 census of Protestants, Nantinan Parish, the number in each family was Peter 2, Philip 4, Paul 6. Presumably Paul had four children born before 1766.

Paul, a younger son (1736), accepted the invitation of Sir William Barker to settle on his lands in Co. TIP. Five Palatine families moved there in 1772, signing a communal lease in 1773. Details of the lease are described in The Smeltzers of Kilcooly. The name of Paul's wife Elizabeth at the base of his tombstone was probably inscribed at the time of his death in 1808. No dates were added for her, no maiden name given.

Three of the original 2-story limestone houses built in 1773 remain on Palatine St. but are no longer occupied. Today it costs less to build a new house than to modernize an old one. In the 1826 Tithe Applotment three lessees are listed in order: John Switzer, John Ruckle and John Smeltzer. The house known today as Sparling's is undoubtedly the Smeltzer home, taken over by Samuel Sparling when John Smeltzer emigrated.

The original houses on Palatine St. had thatched roofs which were later replaced by slate. When last occupied, the Smeltzer house had a small entrance hall, two fireplaces downstairs, one upstairs and a range in the kitchen. The Ruckle house next to it had flagstone floors downstairs, a parlor to the right, kitchen and small dining room to the left, both closed off from the hall by doors. Upstairs were 3 bedrooms.

Paul's proved children are Margaret Switzer (1786) and John (1770) named on the lease. Other children (born before 1766) were Peter, Philip Sr., Elizabeth Cantelon- Paul 1775.

A2, John Smeltzer (1770-1837) m Mary Ann Wilson

Although John, age 3, was named on the lease, he was not the oldest. Younger sons were sometimes named to lengthen the life of the lease (3 lives.) In 1796 John married Mary Ann Wilson in Kilcooly. There was a John Wilson on the religious census of Protestants in Nantinan in 1766. Rev. R.J. Wilson (a later generation) was pastor of the Baptist Chapel in Kilcooly.

John was living in the original Smeltzer house on Palatine St. in 1826. He shared Pew No. 19 in the 1829 Kilcooly Church with his neighbor John Ruckle, who had succeeded to the lease of Daniel Ruckle, one of the original Newpark settlers. John of Newpark may be the John Smeltzer who signed minutes as a church warden with an X. John of Toronto Twp. signed the deed for his property in 1832 with an X. John's sister Margaret Switzer and her children emigrated to Ontario in 1827, his daughter Elizabeth Colclough in 1830. After John left about 1831 his home and lands were acquired by Samuel Sparling. In 1826 a widow Sparling lived nearby on Palatine St. Other Sparlings married Smeltzers in Canada.

Since the publication of The Smeltzers of Kilcooly in 1981 new data on some of John Smeltzer's descendants have been found: Paul (1802), Sarah Bowles (1818), Mary Hillis (1814) and Mary Ann Perdue, daughter of Prudence Perdue. Circumstantial evidence suggests that Joseph Smeltzer (E) of Goderich was a son of John of Toronto Twp. Living next to Joseph in Goderich was Thomas Carter, born about 1822. He may be a son of Ann Smeltzer and Thomas Carter who married in Kilcooly in 1819. Ann may be a daughter of John ( not proved.) A descendant of John Smeltzer (D) of Garafraxa believes her grandfather's sister (Mary) married a Hillis and that her father had a Hillis cousin in E. Garafraxa. Each of John's five daughters had a daughter Charlotte. They may have had a sister Charlotte who died in Ireland or on the voyage.

A22. Paul Smeltzer (1802-1872) m Ann Harriet Grundy (1809 - )

When Paul's father died in 1837, Paul sold the family farm in Toronto Twp. to Thomas Montgomery, an innkeeper of Etobicoke.

His wife and mother relinquished their dower rights. Paul then purchased two parcels from Montgomery in Sombra Twp., Lambton Co.: CON X Lot 10 S ½ (100 acres) and CON X Lot 8½ (Land Reg.) In 1841 Paul sold CON X Lot 8 to his brother-in-law John Bowles.

Paul was born about 1802 ('61 census), probably in the Smeltzer home in Newpark. Paul's marriage to Ann Harriet Grundy very likely took place in Canada; their first child was born in Toronto Twp. in 1836. Their second son William was born in Lambton Co. in 1840 ('61 census). A typed copy of William's death certificate shows his mother's name as "Grimdby," a misreading of "Grundy." W.T. Grant, writing local history in the 1930's, identified Paul's wife as "Grundy." Paul's niece married a Grundy. The Grundy family was from Co. Kilkenny.

A tiny plot on the Smeltzer farm, near a gully by the river, was known locally as the "Smeltzer Cemetery." Paul, his wife Ann Harriet, his mother Mary Ann Wilson and his unmarried son John are believed buried there. The next owner of the farm carefully plowed around the little pile of stones.

The 1866 atlas shows Paul and his sons as the owners of CON XII Lot 6, leased to F.P. Currier (Land Reg.) After Paul's death in 1872 his son John retained 80 acres of the family farm. He and his mother sold 20 acres to his brother William; William sold the property in 1874. In 1877 he was on CON IX Lot 12. John, a bachelor, sold his farm in Nov. 1877. Some of the early deeds spell the name "Smaltzar."

Paul's son William married Anne Elizabeth Watson about 1870. Four of their unmarried sons, James, Marshal (twins who died of diphtheria), Paul and John are buried with their parents in Duthill Cemetery. They had two other sons, Amos and Clifford and five daughters, Ann (Thomas), Rachel (Boulton), Susan (Winter), Mary J. (Meyers) and Margaret (Swain.) William's eldest son Paul purchased 150 acres CON VII Lot 15 N 3/4 in 1900 for $6100. In 1924 he was on CON VIII Lot 15 as well. He died in 1952. In 1955 his brother John granted CON VIII Lot 15 to Amos, a younger brother, for $6000.

A26. Sarah Smeltzer (c1818-1882) m John Bowles (1802-1873)

Sarah was still in her teens when she married John Bowles (Boles), a widower of Toronto Twp. born in Co. TIP. Witnesses at her marriage at St. Peter's Erindale in 1836 were her brother Paul and a John Bowles. In 1826 there were several Bowles living in Kilcooly Parish: John and a widow Bowles in Blackcommon, Charles and George in Bonlea. The families may have known each other in Ireland. The Bowles family had English roots, may have settled in Ireland in Cromwell's time. William Boes of Boulick Parish (next to Kilcooly) paid a Hearth Tax in Co. TIP in 1666.

Born in Kilcooly, Sarah emigrated to Ontario with her parents, brother and sisters. Her first son John Bowles Jr. was baptised at St. Peter's 13 Nov. 1836. An ommission of "Bowles" in the church record implied that the infant was the son of John and Sarah Smeltzer (non-existent). The birthdate of the infant is that of John Bowles Jr. in the family Bible.

Some time between 1838 and 1841 the Bowles moved to Lambton Co. where John Bowles had purchased 100 acres CON X Lot 8 from his brother-in-law Paul Smeltzer. In the 1861 agricultural census, the Bowles had a log house, land under cultivation, pasture and garden, sheep, pigs and other farm animals. In 1868 Sarah released her dower rights on CON X Lot 8 to her son Charles (deed.) Charles sold 50 acres in 1876, 50 acres in 1877 (Land Reg.) In the 1866-67 Gazeteer for Lambton Co. both Charles and John were on CON XI Lot 8. They were still there in 1877 (Lambton Co. Directory.)

Sarah's age on the census, cemetery records and obituary varies; a likely birthdate is 1818. John Bowles died 9 Dec. 1878 at age 71 or 72, following a fall on the farm. Sarah was still on the farm in the '81 census. Her death certificate shows she died 1 Feb. 1882, age 64, in W. Gwillimbury at the home of a relative. Sarah and John were buried in Riverside Cemetery, Sombra (Bury's Burying Ground.) (Sarnia Obs 10 Feb.)

The Bowles had 14 children. John, Charles, Mary Ann (Henry) and David remained in Lambton Co. Three of the girls married three White brothers, sons of Samuel White and Anna Daken. Tradition has it that Catherine Bowles and Daniel White eloped to Marine City, MI. Margaret married James White and Harriet became the second wife of John Fancit White. The White families moved west, first to Michigan, then to other western states. Most settled in the vicinity of Pomeroy, WA. Some of the later generations went to other western states and Alberta.

B. PAUL SMELTZER (1775-1871)
m #1 Ann Mercere (c1788-c1833)
m #2 Margaret Perdue Sparrow, wid.
m #3 Margaret Collin Kennedy ( 1803-1873)

Paul lived nearly a century. He emigrated to Canada about 1831-32 when he was over 55 with his wife Ann Mercere and their 8 children. He married twice in Canada and fathered 6 more children after he was 63. His birthdate of 1775 indicates he was a son of Paul (1736); New York Smeltzers called him a first cousin - probably "once removed." In the 1826 Tithe Applotment Paul was living in Acragar (Irish for "Short Acre"), Rathbeagh Parish, Co. Kilkenny, not far from the Tipperary border. He leased two farms, 22 acres mid-class,4 acres 3rd class, land formerly leased by the Mercier family. Some of Paul's younger children may have been born in Co. Kilkenny.

Paul's original tombstone in Zion Cemetery, Whaley's Corners, near Georgetown, was erected by his third wife Margaret. It described him as a "native of Tipperary." It was customary among the Irish in Canada to note on their tombstones the county from which they came. In the 1970's the original stone was replaced by a Michigan (USA) descendant of Paul and Ann and inscribed with their names. It is not known whether Ann was actually buried there. She died nearly 40 years before her husband. A journal kept by Paul's daughter Kitty Lynn and a death certificate show Paul was born in 1775, not 1780 as on the new stone. Margaret, his widow, born in 1803, died 11 May 1873, age 69, and is buried in Greenwood Cemetery, Georgetown.

Mercier records state that Paul was married 3 times. His second wife was undoubtedly Margaret Sparrow, a widow who married Paul Smeltzer "bachelor" at St.Peter's 2 Mar. 1835 (Mar Reg). Both were of Esquesing Twp. Margaret was probably Margaret Perdue who married Edmund Sparrow in the Diocese of Cashel & Emly in 1817 (Mar Index); he died in 1823, age 34. A widow Sparrow lived near John Smeltzer (Paul's older brother) on Palatine St., Newpark in the 1826 Tithe Applotment. Sparrow family research (Ruth Held of CA) shows that Margaret and her 3 children emigrated to the U.S. They may have continued on to Canada. Margaret's marriage to Paul was brief; where she is buried is not known. Paul married again within a year or two. His son James, by his third wife, was born in 1837-38. She was probably a widow, Collin (Colbin) Kennedy - names given by her children on their marriage certificates. George Kennedy was a witness at the marriage of her eldest son James Smeltzer. In the 1851 census Paul's sons John, Abel and Thomas (by Ann Mercere) were working for John Evans, a farmer in Trafalgar TWp. on CON V Lot 2W½ & 3W½. Where Paul's 1½ story brick house stood is now a shopping center.

Ann Mercere - a Huguenot Descendant

The usual spelling of the name is Mercier, a distinguished family of Huguenot origin. In 1598 French Protestants, who were Reformists, followers of John Calvin, had been granted freedom of worship. This privilege was revoked by Louis XIV in 1685 by the Edict of Nantes. Now persecuted for their beliefs, many fled to Ireland, England, the Rhineland and the Low Countries. Those who went to England came under the protection of William of Orange. Several Merciers received commissions in his army.

The Huguenots were welcomed for their industrial skills; they set up silk and linen weaving operations and flour mills. Convinced they would be returning to France, they continued to speak French for several generations. The French Revolution put an end to their hopes of reclaiming their properties. Since their form of worship was more compatible with Scotch Presbyterianism, thousands moved to No. Ireland. Their French origins became lost in Presbyterian church records. Many who had gone to the Rhineland earlier joined the Palatines in their migration to London in 1709. Most were reluctant to participate in the Irish uprising of 1798 against the Crown. Evidence in the possession of David Mercier of New York revises some of the information in the Commemorative Biographical Record of Lambton Co. as given by Isaac Mercier. Data gathered by an earlier David Mercier (1811-1867) in the 1860's is contained in a number of hand-written notebooks, correspondence, wills, church records etc.

The Mercier Pedigree

Jean Mercier, a philologer of Usez, Languedoc, in the south of France, may be an early ancestor. He was a professor at the University of Paris in 1547. Following the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685, three Mercier brothers fled to England: Claude, who married Marthé Bertheau in London in 1691; John (Jean) who married Susanne Thélouin in France and Peter who married Marie Seigné 18 Mar. 1791. Ann Mercere, wife of Paul Smeltzer, was a descendant of John.

John Mercier & Susanne Thélouin: son David born 10 Oct 1667 in France; died 15 June 1716, age 50, Acragar, Co. Kilkenny
David Mercier: son John born 1705; died 25 Jan. 1787, age 82; m. Anne Daillon (Dillon)
John Mercier & Anne Daillon: son Abel born 1725; died 2 Mar. 1809; m. Anne Colclough, an old English family long prominent in Ireland.
Children of Abel & Anne: Mary (m John McMillan 1804), Frances (m James Agar 1811), Anne (c1788 m Paul Smeltzer), Hannah, William (lived with his nephew William Smeltzer), John (1780-1850; m Sarah Pyne Lodge 1804), George, twins Abel (m Susan Taylor) and Sarah (m Jacob Banks) MERCIER

Mercier Leases

The earliest lease was noted by I. A. Nixon of Clone House, Ballyragget, Freshford, in a letter dated 22 Aug. 1873 to David Mercier. Nixon recalled that David's ancestor had come from France where he was a man of property and position; family papers showed that a lease for 3 lives was given to John Mercier 25 Mar. 1759 for 31 acres in Acragar. On 30 Oct. 1805 a lease for similiar lands was given to David Mercier for 3 lives. (This David was a son of John and a brother of Ann's father Abel.) Subsequently the lands were leased to Paul Smeltzer. Nixon noted that Paul had "gone to America" and that nothing was known about him. Paul may have left because the lease expired or the rent increased drastically.

Merciers in the 19th Century

William Mercier, Ann's brother and Frances Mercier, who had married James Agar, emigrated to Canada about 1816. (Ann's grandson Thomas Reed, son of Amelia Smeltzer, married Sarah Ann Agar in Canada). Ann's brother John, born 1798, married Susan Taylor, emigrated to Canada in 1830, returned two years later to Durrow, Co. Leix. Frances Mercier of Co. Leix married Arthur Thompson of Kilcooly, went to Australia in this century.

Mercier records show that Ann Mercere married Paul Smeltzer by license 14 May 1814. In Paul's own Bible (printed by Zachariah Jackson in 1793 in Dublin) he had written the date 15 May 1813. When Ann Marie Smeltzer (Sparling), Ann's oldest daughter, died in May 1895 her age was given as 82, indicating a birthdate of 1813-14. Ann Mercere is believed to have been born about 1788 and died a year or two after they emigrated - 1833-34.

Permission to use the Mercier family data has been given by David Mercier of Riverdale, NY, formerly of Limerick. He has in preparation a more complete history of the various branches of the Mercier family. Today Mercier descendants live in Ireland, England, South Africa, Canada, the United States and Australia.

Anne Colclough

The mother of Ann Mercere was Anne Colclough. In Canada the name is usually pronounced "Coke-ly;" in Ireland "Collick." The family had seats at Tintern Abbey and other locations in Co. Wexford and other counties. Burke's Irish Family Records does not reveal an Ann who might have been the bride of Abel Mercier. According to Isaac Mercier of Forest, ONT, Ann was a descendant of Sir Anthony Colclough of Tintern Abbey.

C. PHILIP SMELTZER Sr. (bef 1766 - )
m Dora Dulmage
Renaghmore, Co. Tipperary

In the 1766 census of Protestants in Ballingrane, Co. LIM, Paul (1736) had four children; one is presumed to be Philip Sr. In 1826 two Philips leased land in Kilcooly. One had 28 acres in Renaghmore (probably Sr.), the other 5 acres in Grange (Jr.) Allocation of pews in the 1829 Kilcooly Church shows Philip (Sr.) sharing Pew No. 18 with Thomas Smeltzer and Jacob Cantelon (Sr.) Present-day residents believe Philip Sr. lived with Thomas in his late years. Philip Sr., Jr. and Elizabeth rented a house and 9 acres to James Kelly in 1850. Elizabeth was probably Philip's mother, her name still on the record. Tradition says that Philip's wife was Dora Dulmage. The Commission on Irish Education in 1826 reported that the thatched schoolhouse in Kilcooly (a Baptist-supported school) was built by the schoolmaster's father, i.e. Philip Sr.

Philip's brothers are believed to be Peter (bef 1766), John (1770) and Paul (1775), sisters Margaret Switzer (1768) and Elizabeth Cantelon (m 1804.) His two proved sons are John Sr. (1798) and Philip Jr. (1805), both of whom emigrated. Contemporary with them were Thomas, William, Robert, Daniel, Kate and Margaret - either siblings or cousins.

C1. John Smeltzer Sr. (1798-1861) m #1 Margaret Finlay (d aft 1835); m Susan Finlay (Jones) ( c1810-1905)

John's first wife was, according to Susan, her sister Dora. The marriage index for the Diocese of Kildare (1826) shows it was Margaret Finlay. Margaret is the name John's son Phillip gave on his marriage license in Canada. Susan may have confused the name with John's mother Dora or his daughter Dora, or she may have been Margaret Dora.

Also in Kildare is the record of Susan's first marriage to Edward Jones in 1832. The family believed it was George. Both names may be correct. Susan's oldest son Robert Jones (her father was Robert) had a son George; her second son was Edward. The Finlays are believed to be of Scotch or Scotch-Irish origin.

Tradition is that John's five children by his first wife disapproved of his marriage to their aunt and the four oldest went to Canada to "Uncle Will." This may have been William, son of Paul (1775). William had married in 1843 and lived in Garafraxa Twp. until 1871 when he took his family to Michigan.

John's sons Paul and Thomas (assuming the names to be correct) have not been located. A Thomas became a naturalized citizen in New York City in 1868, lived in lower Manhattan. John's daughter Dora married her cousin Thomas Smeltzer, son of Paul

(1775) in Canada. John's youngest son Phillip lived with his parents in New York for 5 years, then went to Canada to his sister Dora after a quarrel with his father. In a letter to his half-brother John 40 years later, Phillip asked for news of their sister Margaret. (Was she "Louisa" Switzer of Orangeville?)

In the 1826 Tithe Applotment, John leased 5 acres in Grange; in 1850 he had a lease for 27 acres from the Barker estate. By trade he was a blacksmith as well as a farmer, forging iron gates and household accessories. Old maps show a forge on Palatine St. said to have been operated by John Smeltzer. Whether this was John Sr. or his uncle John of Newpark is not known. John's fields in Renaghmore adjoined those of his brother Philip Jr., the schoolmaster. Only a few foundation stones remain.

John Sr.is not listed as a pewholder in 1829. John in Pew No.6 was a son of Peter; John in No. 19 was a son of Paul (1736) of Newpark. Tradition says that John Sr. was a vestryman at John Street Methodist Chapel in Manhattan. He was probably a member of the general vestry (congregation) but not on the select vestry (governing board.)

C16. Rev. John Smeltzer (1852-1937) m Elizabeth Case (1856-1937)

American-born John never used the term "Jr." since his father died in 1861 when John was only nine. He lived with his mother in New York City. After his marriage his mother lived with him and his wife "Lizzie" Case in Brooklyn until a few years before her death at the home of her daughter Georgiana Jones Waldron. During his marriage John became an ordained Baptist minister. He accepted no salary, supporting his family by working as a printing plant superintendent. Although he had five sons who grew to manhood, there was only one male in the next generation, Edgar Jr. (Edgar's children, listed incorrectly in The Smelters of Kilcooly, have been revised.)

Elizabeth Augusta Case

Elizabeth was born in Coram, Long Island, NY, the daughter of William Case and his second wife Jane Shea. Jane was born in Ireland, the daughter of Morgan Shea and Eliza Emmet. Her blind sister Eliza lived with the Smeltzers until her death in 1892, age 44. Jane had emigrated as a child and been brought up by a Protestant aunt; her sister, a Catholic, arrived some years later. Their brother Edward Shea, a painter, fell off a ladder and fractured his neck. He died in San Francisco 6 Dec. 1868, age 34. Edward had two children, Annie T. Barker and John Shea. John often lived with the Smeltzers when his mother was unwell. The country home on Long Island where the Smeltzers spent their summers was owned by Edward's widow Julia. Elizabeth Smeltzer purchased it from the estate in 1909.

Elizabeth's father William Case, an ironworker, was born in England, the son of James Case and Augusta Williams. The Cases are believed to be of Scotch ancestry from Edinburgh. Augusta was said to be related to Roger Williams of the famous Rhode Island clan. William died of pneumonia 2 Dec.1878 at age 55. His death certificate states that he had been in the country 30 years (c1848) and 27 in Brooklyn, NY. He joined the Masonic Order in Brooklyn, Sewanaka Lodge Nô. 678 F&AM in 1868. He was also a Past Grand of Eckford Lodge No.2234 IOOF (now No. 22) at Bowery & Delancy St., Manhattan. Three of his grandsons were Masons, one a Past Master, one a 32° Mason and also an Odd Fellow. A family heirloom, worn by Elizabeth, is a tiny gold and blue enameled slipper that identified mothers, wives and sisters of Master Masons when they traveled, before the OES.

The Case family moved briefly to Rahway, NJ, where the little girls contracted typhoid fever. Sarah Ann, age one and another daughter died. Jane died a year after her husband of heart disease in 1879, age 40. William and Jane are buried in Hazelwood Cemetery, Rahway, with Sarah Ann. Also in the plot is Walter Case, age 21, who died 8 July 1869, a son of William by his first marriage. William Jr., another son, lived in Brooklyn. William Sr.'s brother James was a Baptist deacon.

Before her marriage Lizzie taught school. Years later, in a dispute with the local school, she withdrew her sons, set in the window a sign "Select School" and argued she was qualified to teach them herself. She won! Although brought up as an Episcopalian, she was a soloist and organist at Gethsemane Baptist Church. Her mother-in-law referred to her as "that little English girl!" The family lived on Flushing Ave., Brooklyn, then a "suburb" of Manhattan.

When Elizabeth and John married, they agreed that he would name the girls, she would name the boys. They had only one girl, Elizabeth, who died at 3 days. When the sixth son was born, each member of the family wrote a name on a piece of paper and placed it in a bowl of water. The first to unfold was to be the baby's name. It was "Walter Irving" the choice of his mother Elizabeth! John, Elizabeth and their son Walter, who died at age 18, are buried in Union Cemetery, Ramsey, NJ.

For additional details see The Smeltzers of Kilcooly

C2. Philip Smeltzer Jr. (1805-1861) m Ann Barkman (1813-1899)

In Kilcooly, Philip Jr. was referred to as "the master" to distinguish him from his father and his cousin Philip II (the "blue tooth".) He was the master of the Anabaptist school in Kilcooly. Students included both Protestants and Catholics. The Commission on Irish Education in 1826 noted that it was a one-room school built by the master's father. Not a "hedge" schoōl in the usual sense, classes may have been held out-of-doors on fine days around the "Master's Rock." Philip's own home was two stories and protected by iron gates.

Philip was also a lay preacher. A descendant told of his being stoned after preaching as he left the Baptist Chapel in Bonlea. Strongly anti-Catholic, he and his children were constantly threatened by a local gang called "Hoe Boys" whose weapons were their garden hoes. In 1847 Philip and his family left secretly by night for America. The school closed a few years after. (See Irish Education.)

In a marriage arranged by her aunt, Ann Barkman of Co. LIM (the Oliver estate) wed Philip Jr. in 1835 in Kilflyn without having met him previously (he had seen her.) Their first home in the US was in Bloomfield, NJ, a suburb of New York City. A few years later they moved to Manhattan. Three more children were born in the US; two died young. Philip Jr, his sons Thomas and Philip III became naturalized citizens. Both Philip Jr. and his brother John had daughters Dora, supporting the tradition that their mother was Dora Dulmage. The Dulmages (Dolmage, Delmege from Dolmetsch) were a large Palatine family said to be of Alsatian origin. Both Philip and John had sons Thomas, Philip and John. Thomas in Ireland may have been a brother.

Philip may not have been qualified to teach in the US. He advised fellow countrymen on business and legal matters, wrote letters for the illiterate and was employed by an envelope manufacturing firm. He died in 1861. Evergreens Cemetery records for "John" match his date of death and address. He may have been "Philip John." His brother John died the same year and is buried in the plot.

D. JOHN SMELTZER (1803-1871)
m Charlotte Switzer (1812-1863)
Prince Edward Island & W. Garafraxa, ONT

Traveling by ox-cart with a family of five boys and four girls, John Smeltzer and his wife Charlotte Switzer arrived in the Guelph-Fergus area about 1851. For more than a decade John had been a tollgate keeper in the Dundas area, later at Cumnock, Wentworth Co. (No. 6 Hwy.) A farmer at heart, John looked a-around the Garafraxa area for land. He applied for a Crown Patent on CON V Lot 15 W. Garafraxa, Wellington Co., a 100-acre lot which was vacant. The Patent (deed) was registered in 1867, financed by the Huron & Erie Savings & Loan Society.

John was born in Ireland in 1803, died in 1871, age 68. The dates are noted in the family Bible of his son David, and confirmed by the Land Register. His 100 acres were divided by will in 1871 between his sons David and Benjamin. The Reg. Gen. has no record of his death. Charlotte was born in 1812 in Ireland, died in 1863. After her death John lived with his son David. Both John and Charlotte are buried in Mt. Carmel Cemetery. In 1981 their grandchildren and great-grandchildren, on the initiative of their great-grandson Gordon Smeltzer of Eramosa Twp., replaced the eroded stone with another in memory of these pioneers. A re-examination of the original stone confirms John's death date as 1871 (not the date on the new stone.)

Probably married in Ireland, John and Charlotte emigrated to Prince Edward Island about 1829-30. English proprietors who had been given large grants of land there paid the passage of families who agreed to settle on their lands. (Those who went to Ontario had to pay their own way.) The soil in PEI was generally poor and the proprietors refused to sell the land. A family tradition of a shipwreck has not been proved.

The two oldest daughters, Sarah and Mary, were born about 1830 and 1832 in PEI. Archives in PEI show a son David born 25 Mar. 1835 on Lot 19 and baptised in Richmond Parish. He is unknown to the present family and not recorded in David's Bible. Two other sons were born in PEI, John in 1837 and Joseph in 1839 ('51 W. Flamboro census.) John and Charlotte may have heard of greater opportunities in Ontario. They probably left PEI about 1840; their son William was born in Dundas in 1841. According to family tradition, they arrived in Hamilton, ONT by way of New York. PEI did more trade with New England and the Middle Atlantic states than with the mainland of Canada. It may have been easier to obtain passage by this route. They are said to have traveled to Niagara Falls and stopped briefly in Sarnia, Lambton Co. before continuing to Ancaster, near Hamilton. Five children were born after the move to Ontario. David (II) born in 1848 in Beverly Twp. is a different person from David (I) of PEI, who probably died as an infant. David must have been an important family name.

John's father (not proved) may be John of Toronto Twp. (1770-1837). Ella MacDonald, daughter of his son Benjamin, states that her grandfather had a sister (Mary) who married a Hillis (James) and that her father had Hillis cousins in E. Garafraxa. Ann Switzer, a niece of John of Toronto Twp., married John Jr. (1837) son of John of Garafraxa, suggesting a family relationship. Charlotte Switzer's parents (not proved) may be John (John Christopher) Switzer born in Ireland in 1781 and Sarah Hill. Their son John Jr. may be a brother of Charlotte and of William Switzer of Orangeville, with whom John Sr., a widower, lived in 1861 (census.)

John & Charlotte's first home in W. Garafraxa was a log house. Later on the property was divided into two lots of 50 acres each and another log house built. The older sons lived in one; the other was enlarged for the girls, the younger sons and their parents. By 1861 (census) the three older girls, Sarah, Mary and Margaret had left home.

Many of John's children stayed in the Garafraxa area. His son John settled on CON III Lot 32 NE½ in Arthur. Joseph was on CON III Lot 32 S½W Garafraxa; William on CON IV Lot 19 W. Garafraxa. David lived in E. Luther Twp. on CON III Lot 20. In 1890 he moved to South River, ONT for his health. Benjamin remained on his father's property CON V Lot 15 E½. In the next generation many homesteaded in the western provinces; some remained in the Fergus area and So. River. The new bridge on the Eramosa Road from Rockwood, which passes the farm of the late J. Gordon Smeltzer,CON II Lot 27, was named the SMELTZER BRIDGE in honor of this pioneer family.

D9. David Smeltzer (1848-1920) m Ellen McKee (1846-1924)

David was 13 years younger than the first of John's sons to bear that name. After the move to W. Garafraxa he worked on the family farm. In 1870 he married Ellen McKee, daughter of Robert McKee and stepdaughter of David's sister Mary. In David's family Bible his parents' names are written "Smelcher" and "Switcher."

Troubled by asthma, David decided that the climate of So. River, ONT might be better for his health. He sold his interest in the family farm to his brother Benjamin and took his family north. Jessie, his youngest daughter, recalled that the family traveled by train, were met by a neighbor and taken to a farm that David had already purchased. On it were a log house and some outbuildings. There was no school or church within five miles or more. As they grew older, David's sons Robert John and William Leslie, who became a blacksmith, worked in lumber camps during the winter. When Robert married he took over the farm. David and Ellen moved into the village. David carried the mail to the train and for a time was town constable.

Hearing about the good land in the west, David went to Alberta alone, bought a quarter section (160 acres) several miles from the railroad at Clive. In 1912 he persuaded his son Robert John and wife Sarah to move there. His son-in-law Robert Pye, who worked in a chemical plant, had been advised by his doctor to take an outdoor job. David persuaded the Pye family to move to Alberta also.

They left South River in June 1913 with their "settlers effects" - furniture, tools, small machinery and farm animals - watched over in the freight car by Robert. His daughter Lois recalled the journey with her mother, infant sister and grandmother. The colonists' cars had hard wooden seats that folded down at night to provide beds. On a little stove in the rear of the car her grandmother boiled water for tea. Food for the 4 to 5 day journey was carried in a suitcase. Starting with rented acreage, Robert Pye supplemented his income with work as a carpenter and mason. The new settlement had few improvements.

Life on the farm was hard and lonely for Robert's wife Rose Smeltzer. She missed her twin sister and family back in South River. At harvest time preparation of meals for the farmhands was endless. Farms were usually distant from the schools. Children rode their ponies to school, passing them from one child to another, one farm to another, for as long as 30 years. A bag of oats was taken along to feed the pony at lunchtime. During the winter the children boarded in the village.

David did not remain long in Alberta. He found that the climate did not agree with his asthma. In 1913 he and his wife returned to South River. Robert John's descendants still live on the family farm in Clive. Robert and Rose Pye's descendants live in western Canada.

E. JOSEPH SMELTZER (1804-1889)
m Elizabeth Cronyn (1813-1853)
Goderich Twp., Ontario

Canada Co. records show that Joseph "Smeltzar" applied for CON X Lots 35, 36 on 21 Jan. 1839, the first Smeltzer on the Huron Tract. A renter in the 1851 census, evidently he did not fulfill the purchase terms. His son John purchased Lot 36 from the Canada Co. on 31 Jan. 1861. Before 1839-40 Joseph was probably living in southern Ontario. Joseph Smelcer signed a petition by men of Halton & Peel Cos. for the release of Henry Cole from prison. Joseph may have cleared the land and planted crops but not lived in Goderich until 1840-41.

A "native of Tipperary" (tombstone) Joseph married Elizabeth Cronyn in the Diocese of Ossory & Ferns (Co. Kilkenny) in 1832 (Mar. Index), emigrating soon after their marriage. Their first son John was born in Canada 1833-34 ('61 census.) No baptismal record has been found. Two of their children were baptised at St. Paul's in London, ONT by the Rev. Benjamin Cronyn, Elizabeth's cousin. The others were baptised in Goderich several years after birth. Elizabeth, mother of 10, died in 1853 at age 40, probably in childbirth. Joseph Sr. continued to farm in Goderich Twp., later moved to Kinloss Twp. He died in 1889 and is buried in Blyth with his son Morris and Morris' two wives.

Joseph's father has not been proved; a likely possibility is John of Toronto Twp. (1770-1837.) Joseph, born in 1804, would be a younger brother of Paul, 1802. Joseph's oldest son John can be presumed named for his grandfather. The family claims descent from "Paul in Ireland"(Paul of the 1773 lease.) Another tradition is that of three brothers named Maurice, Edward and Paul. A rough chart showed John as the common ancestor. A descendant changed it to Joseph. Joseph's son John had three brothers, Maurice,Edward and Paul as well as Joseph Jr. On this same chart is part of the family of David of So. River (born in Hespeler), a son of John of Garafraxa (1803). John and Joseph may well be brothers.

When John of Toronto Twp. decided to go to Canada in 1831, Joseph may have been working in Co.Kilkenny and planning to marry. Living in Kilkenny at the time was Paul Smeltzer (1775), John's brother and Elizabeth Smeltzer Colclough, John's daughter. Joseph's son, Paul of Goderich, married Martha Earls of Chinguacousy Twp. in southern Ontario in 1861. One of his witnesses was Joseph A. Switzer, son of Margaret Smeltzer Switzer, presumed sister of Joseph. Elizabeth Colclough, her older sister from Co. Kilkenny, now lived in Chinguacousy Twp. also. Relatives in the area may be a reason for Paul's finding a bride so far from home. Paul's son William married Mercilla Reed, a granddaughter of Amelia Smeltzer (daughter of Paul) who had lived in Co. Kilkenny. She was also the granddaughter of Barbara Smelser McGee, daughter of Philip Smeltzer II in Ireland.

In 1905 John Bowles wrote to his uncle Joseph Bowles, a son of Sarah Smeltzer Bowles (possible sister of Joseph) that he had seen Paul Smeltzer in Lucknow and that all was well. He also mentioned that Joseph Smeltzer (Paul's younger brother) was "running the roads again." The comments infer that they were family members whom Joseph Bowles knew. W.T. Grant, writing local history in the 1930's, noted that Paul Smeltzer of Lambton Co. (son of John of Toronto Twp.) had relatives in Goderich and Lucknow. Joseph Smeltzer's son Paul was living in Lucknow.

Elizabeth Cronyn

Elizabeth came from a prominent Kilkenny family of early Danish or Huguenot origin, established near Kells. Eight Cronyn tombs are in St.Kieran's Churchyard in Kells. Elizabeth was the youngest of 10 children of Maurice of Stonecarty and Jane Bead (Reed) (1771-1851). Jane's birthdate is inconsisent with the ages of her older children. (It may have been mis-read.) Children of Maurice and Jane were Edward (1778-1852; married Charlotte --), Marks (Morris ? 1787-1852; m Elizabeth Duncan), George (bapt 1780), Abraham (bapt 1795), Mary, Margaret (died young), Abigail, Jane, Susannah and Elizabeth.

Maurice Cronyn was a son of John Cronyn, steward to Lord Carrick and son of John of Johnswell . Maurice died 1843. His will was probated 7 Feb. 1844. His wife Jane died in 1851. A tomb was erected to them by their son Edward at Kells. St. Kieran's has no registers prior to 1845.

The Rev. Benjamin Cronyn of London, ONT, a son of Maurice's brother Thomas, emigrated to Canada in 1832. A group of friends and classmates from Trinity College, Dublin, chartered a cargo boat, fitting it out with passenger quarters. They landed at Montreal, crossed Lake Ontario to Queenston by steamer,went up river to Lake Erie, disembarking at Port Stanley, thence by wagon to London via St. Thomas. Bound for Adelaide, Benjamin stopped over in London, then a settlement in the wilderness, and preached in the vacant pulpit there. He was persuaded to remain at St. Paul's. He was consecrated the first Bishop of Huron Diocese at Lambeth Palace, ENG in 1857. Two of his children married children of William Hume Blake, a friend who emigrated with him and later became a Chancellor of Upper Canada. Other Canadian Cronyns were writers and historians. The internationally known actor Hume Cronyn is part of the clan.

Cronyn family data is based on a family tree compiled in May 1913 by J.C.B. Bushby of Herts., ENG, now in the Huron Diocese Archives of Huron College, London, ONT copyrighted by Huron College. Permission from Charles Addington, archivist, to use the information.

F1. JOHN SMELTZER (bef 1789-1858)
m Elizabeth Lawrence (1789-1877)
Co, Kilkenny & Bruce Co., ONT

An obituary of John's wife Elizabeth states that five children accompanied their parents to Canada in 1858. An obituary of her granddaughter Catherine Smeltzer, preserved in Jane Yemen's Scrapbook, places two sons in Canada 10 years earlier. Records of old St. Paul's, Woodstock, ONT confirm this. Philip Smeltzer of Eastwood, Oxford Co., died at age 23, recorded by Rev. Wm. Bettridge 8 Aug. 1847. (Huron Co. Arch.) Joseph Smeltzer, also of Eastwood, was confirmed at St. Paul's in 1848. Eastwood was a hamlet near Blandford & Oxford Twps. owned largely by Admiral Henry Van Sittart, who operated lumber and flour mills in the area and built a 40-room mansion for himself. The young men may have been employed in the mills. No tombstone has been found for Philip. Where Joseph spent the next 10 years is not known.

John Smeltzer, son of Peter, was one of 47 who shared a communal lease in Blackcommon, Co. TIP in 1826. The townland was one of the most densely populated in Kilcooly Parish and included many coal miners. John's son Joseph was baptised in Kilmanagh Parish,Co. KIK in 1829, his daughters Mary and Barbara married there in 1833 and 1838. John may have moved to his father's property of 34 acres in Banse Glebe. In the 1829 Kilcooly Church John shared a pew with his father Peter, his brother Philip II and Matt Hayden, his brother-in-law. Some members of the general vestry were not residents of the parish.

John and Elizabeth had 9 grown children when they decided to emigrate. Elizabeth was 69, John probably older. Unable to withstand the rigors of the voyage, John died at sea. The family arrived in Georgetown in 1858, applied for land in Huron Twp., Bruce Co. and walked into the bush the following year. Daughter Ann, her husband Andrew Morton and their 3 children went along. Elizabeth may have arrived in 1858 or the following year. Two married daughters, Mary Jackson and Barbara Mason, remained in Ireland. Sons Peter and John, both bachelors, worked the family farm. Their brother Joseph married Frances Alton, had a family of 9. Nothing is known about John's daughter Catherine.( Could she be "Agnes" who married Michael Melumpsey (Molomby) in the Diocese of Ossory in 1834?) The original Smeltzer farms in Bruce Co. are still owned by the family.

Banse Glebe, Kilmanagh Parish, Co. Kilkenny

This small townland was owned almost entirely by the Rev. Hans Caulfield, Rt. Rev. Bishop of Ossory, in 1850 (GPV.) Griffith indicates a churchyard that has since been removed. The eroded stones may be among those lined up in the Kilmanagh Parish churchyard. The rectory has been restored and is occcupied by a farmer.

Elizabeth Lawrence

The founder of the Lawrence family in Ireland was John Lorentz age 39 in 1709. He probably died between 1715 and 1720. His widow Margaret was head of the family on the Southwell estate in 1720. George Lorentz was also head of a family in 1729. His son Peter was a freeholder in Ballingrane as were Andrew and Sebastian, thought to be sons of Peter. Sebastian, a freeholder in 1761, is probably the one who went to Kilcooly. Other Lawrences went to Killiheen, Canada and the American Colonies in the 18th century. (Hank Jones, The Palatine Families of Ireland.)

The 1825 Tithe Applotment for Co, KIK shows two Lawrences in Banse Glebe, John 4 acres and Joseph 10 acres. Their relation to Sebastian is not known. Other lessees in that year were Samuel Colbeck 43 acres, Edward Hogan 49 acres, Francis Thompson, John Holmes, John Grace and Mr. Lauders.

In the Diocese of Cashel & Emly (Co. TIP) Elizabeth Sutcliff married Sebastian Lawrence in 1786, possibly a second marriage. Elizabeth Lawrence, born in 1789, may be their daughter. Elizabeth's tombstone "Smaltzar" in St. Luke's Lurgan Cemetery calls her a "native of Tipperary." She may have spent most of her life there. She died in Canada at age 87.

F17. Joseph Smeltzer (1829-1910) m Frances Alton (1825-1928)

Joseph, the only son to marry, wed Frances Alton of Ashfield Twp. in 1860. Family tradition says the courtship was brief, due partly to the 16-mile walk through the bush to Belfast! The Alton family had planned to emigrate when Daniel, head of the household, died unexpectedly in 1847. Their plans made, his widow Agnes, her six sons and three daughters went ahead and sailed for Canada. A son died on the voyage, a daughter the first winter in Goderich Twp. After traveling from Quebec to Hamilton by Lake boat and wagon to Goderich, Agnes bought 400 acres in Belfast at 40 pounds per hundred acres, sold 100 acres to each of her four sons. Frances and her mother lived on CON X Lot 12 Ashfield Twp. Agnes was a Ruttle (Ruckle). She may be related to the Kilcooly Ruckles.

The Alton family, originally Altimes, was of Palatine origin. Georg Altheimer was 40 years old in 1709, married and with 5 children. Casper (or Jasper) Altimes was a freeholder in Ballingrane on the Southwell estate. By 1900 all of the family had adopted the anglicized spelling of Alton. (Hank Jones, The Palatine Families of Ireland.)

For additional details see The Smeltzers of Kilcooly

F18. Elizabeth Smeltzer (1824-5 or 1829-30 - 1921) m James Courtney (1818-1899)

Her obituary calls Elizabeth a native of Kilkenny. Records of her age vary, making uncertain whether she was older or younger than her brother Joseph. In 1860 she married a widower, James Courtney of Wawanosh, who had gone to western Ontario after the death of his first wife Anna May Carey in Norval. (There were Careys in Kilcooly and Ballingarry.) Patrick & Ann Courtney, parents of James, lived in Kilcooly. The families may have known each other. The Courtneys had probably been in England since Cromwell's time when many of his soldiers, instead of returning to England, remained in Ireland. Some received grants of land as a bonus in lieu of pay and purchased bonuses of those returning home. Frances Courtney of Fethard, Co. TIP is listed on the 1666 Hearth Tax Rolls for Co. TIP. Elizabeth brought up James' two children as well as her own. Nieces and nephews from Ireland frequently stayed with her.

F2. PHILIP SMELTZER II ( d early 1860's)
m Mary Steep (c1794-1872)
Renaghmore, Co. Tipperary

Three Philips were living in Kilcooly in the early 19th century: Philip Sr., his son Philip Jr. the schoolmaster and "the other Philip." Philip Jr.'s son Thomas referred to him as "frninst the wall" (opposite) - the old Deer Park wall of the Abbey. A neighbor called him "the blue tooth." (Perhaps he had a silver tooth that had discolored.) She described him as a small, undersized man. To distinguish him from Philip Sr. & Jr., the designation Philip II is used in this book.

Two Philips were pewholders in the 1829 Kilcooly Church. Sharing Pew No. 6 were Peter Smeltzer, his sons John and Philip (II) and his son-in-law Matt Hayden. Pew No. 18 was for Philip (Sr.), his brother-in-law Jacob Cantelon and Thomas Smeltzer.

Three of Philip II's daughters Ann, Margaret and Maria, were married in the Kilcooly Parish Church. The death certificate of Elizabeth Smeltzer Connell in Ontario showed her father as Philip. Elizabeth's proved sister, Barbara Smelser McGee, is thus a daughter of Philip II. Descendants in Ireland stated in 1932 that there was an older son Robert, last known in Toronto and Winnipeg 1910-12 and a son John who died young.

When George W. Holmes of Co. Cork died intestate in 1930, a number of Smeltzer second cousins sued for a share in the estate. George's grandmother Kate Smeltzer, a sister of Thomas, had married John Holmes of Fethard, Co. TIP about 1818. Descendants of Philip II claimed that he, too, was a brother of Kate. Affidavits presented in the case made no mention of Elizabeth Connell or Barbara McGee, Philip II's daughters. The case for Philip is questionable in the light of recent research. Some inconsistencies are discussed in the chapter Rightful Heirs.

Various affidavits in the Holmes case stated that Philip II's wife was Mary Steep (called Mary Phil.) Peter Steep lived at the foot of Steep's Hill in Bonlea, near the old schoolhouse. One of the witnesses to the marriage of Peter's daughter Margaret to Jacob Cantelon Jr. was Peter Steep. Elizabeth Smeltzer, believed to be a sister of Philip II, married Michael Steep in 1820. Michael and Peter shared Pew No. 7 in 1829. Michael may have been a brother of Philip's wife Mary Steep.

A grandson of Philip II stated that his grandfather Philip died "when he was quite young." His grandmother Mary Steep "lived for some time after." A death certificate for Mary Smelleen," widow of a farmer of Renaghmore, is undoubtedly Mary Steep. She died in 1872, age 78. Present at her death was William Taylor of Clonora, a known grandson.

wife of Jacob McGee
daughter of Philip Smeltzer II

ELIZABETH SMELTZER (1830-1926)
wife of George Connell
daughter of Philip Smeltzer II

F21. Ann Smeltzer m John Taylor

Philip's first daughter to wed was Ann, who married John Taylor of Clonora in 1839. Solicitors in the Holmes case attempted to locate William Taylor, a son of Ann who had emigrated to South Africa. Since he had signed his grandmother's death certificate.X, perhaps he couldn't read the notice they placed in South African papers. Some Taylors still live in Kilcooley.

F22. Barbara Smelser (1823-1900) m Jacob McGee (1815-1906)

According to the McGee family Bible, Barbara and Jacob McGee were married in 1842 and emigrated that same year. Tradition is that Jacob "came from Cork." He may have been working there or embarked from there. The McGees had been married over 58 years at her death in 1900, age 77. The older spelling "Smelser" was used on her tombstone. Some of Jacob's nephews, who emigrated later, were associated with Eaton's, a leading Toronto department store. Relatives live in Kilcooley today.

The McGees arrived in Kingston, ONT 11 July 1842. Their oldest daughter Rebecca was born there in 1844. In 1846 Jacob received CON V Lot 2, Caledon Twp.(deed) and was listed in the 1851 census. A son Thomas, born in 1849, was not listed. Living with the McGees was "Elizabeth Spencer",a probable error for Elizabeth Smeltzer, Barbara's younger sister. Later the family moved to western Ontario where Jacob is said to have been a JP and teacher as well as a farmer.

Funeral cards, preserved by family members, show that Barbara's funeral was held in her home in Egmondville and the funeral procession went by way of the Huron Road to Clinton Cemetery. Jacob's funeral was from the residence of his son-in-law Paul Reid (Reed) of Kinloss (son of Amelia Smeltzer Reed) via Grand Trunk Railway for interment at Clinton.

F23. Margaret Smeltzer (c1826- ) m Jacob Cantelon Jr. (c1825- )

Margaret and Jacob were married 24 Feb. 1848 (Kilcooly Reg). Witnesses were Peter Steep and Adam Cantelon. In the 1851 Caledon Twp. census Margaret and Peter shared a house with Adam Cantelon, his wife and children. Since Margaret's first two children were born in Ireland, the Cantelons presumably emigrated about 1850-51. An affidavit in the Holmes case confirmed that the Cantelons went to Canada; the solicitors could not find them. Jacob was the son of Jacob Cantelon Sr. and Elizabeth Smeltzer, married in 1804. Adam Cantelon, 10 years older than Jacob Jr. in the census, was probably a brother.

In 1861 the Jacob Cantelons were living in a 1½ story log house in Turnberry Twp on CON I Lots 31 and 32 (100 acres) and had four more children. The Tweedsmuir Histories (Bluevale) identified Jacob as from Kilcooly and of Anglo-Norman descent. His was the first white family to settle in Bluevale about 1853. In 1856 he donated land for the Orange Lodge and the first Wesleyan Church. The Huron Gazette of 1865 listed him as a merchant of Bellmore and a manufacturer of washing machines. The family was not in the 1871 census for Turnberry Twp.

Cantelons fought for William of Orange at the Battle of the Boyne in Ireland. Four Cantelon brothers, sons of John de Cantillion and Mary Bible, and 25 of their children emigrated to Canada between 1830 and 1844. In 1850 Cantelons owned 8 farms in Goderich Twp. A family history of Cantelons by Peter Joseph Cantelon (1857-1948) refers to Jacob as a cousin.

F24. Elizabeth Smeltzer (1830-1926) m George Connell (c1832- )

Elizabeth's obituary says she arrived in Canada at 16. Her family believes she emigrated with Barbara and Jacob McGee to Kingston and arrived with them in Caledon when she was 16 - the "Elizabeth Spencer" in the 1851 census. Her sister Margaret also lived in Caledon in 1851.

Born Dec. 1830, Elizabeth died in 1926, age 96. Her marriage to George Connell took place 30 Sept. 1853, noted in the family Bible. The date in the Early Mar. Reg. is incorrect. Rev. Samuel Philps, Methodist minister, admitted he was careless about registering marriages some time after the event.

After their first son was born, the Connells moved to Walter's Falls, Holland Centre, Grey Co. About 1880 they went to Huron Co., settling on CON IX Goderich Twp. Their son remained on the family farm with his widowed mother. In her late years Elizabeth lived with her daughter Elizabeth Carter in Hullett.

Another son William maintained a summer resort and picnic area at his home "Connadale" for the citizens of Clinton.

Elizabeth Connell and Elizabeth Smeltzer Courtney, daughter of John & Elizabeth of Bruce Co., were first cousins and lifelong friends. They frequently visited each other and had their picture taken together in their late years. Anona Dale Crozier recalls visiting Elizabeth Connell with her grandmother Barbara McGee Sproat, daughter of Barbara Smelser McGee, by horse and buggy. She places "Aunt Eliza" as her grandmother's aunt. In the early 20th century two Bible brothers from Toronto arrived at the farm of Elizabeth Connell Carter and identified themselves as cousins in the grocery business. They were Frank Henry Bible Sr. and a brother, sons of Maria Smeltzer.

Among the relatives who attended Elizabeth's funeral were Mrs. Paul Reid (Reed) her niece, daughter of Barbara Smelser McGee; Joseph Courtney of Ripley, son of Elizabeth Smeltzer Courtney; Mrs. J. Sproat of Seaforth (Barbara McGee) and Mr. & Mrs. P. McGee of Bayfield (not identified.)

F25. Maria Smeltzer (c1838-1925) m Peter Bible (d 1867) & Andrew Pearson (1854- )

First married to Peter Bible, son of William, in 1859, Maria had three sons, two daughters and twins who died in infancy. Peter died in 1867 when his youngest daughter was 7 mos. old. In 1875 Maria married young Andrew Pearson. She died in 1925, age 87. Maria and Andrew had 3 children; one died in infancy. Their son Benjamin filed claims for himself and his siblings in the George Holmes estate case on the grounds that his grandfather Philip (II) was a brother of George's grandmother Kate Smeltzer Holmes. Maria's 3 sons by Peter Bible emigrated to Canada. Frank (Frank Henry Sr.) established a grocery business in Toronto which became a neighborhood landmark for several generations. Benjamin's son Andrew Pearson lives in Kilcooley.

F28. Rebecca Smeltzer m John Griffiths (not proved)

Omission of some known descendants in the Holmes case suggests there may have been other children of Philip II. The name Rebecca appears only in Philip II's branch. His daughters Barbara and Maria each had a daughter Rebecca; his niece Barbara Mason had a daughter Rebecca. Rebecca Smeltzer & John Griffiths had a daughter Rebecca born in 1859 in Dungandargon, Co. TIP. In the 1826 Tithe Applotment the townland was owned entirely by the Earl of Portarlington. Rebecca married George Organ of Liverpool and emigrated to Canada. Present descendants live in western Canada. See also U(16).

H. PHILIP SMELSER (1733-1789)
(wife not known)
Ballingrane, Co. Limerick

A tombstone erected to Philip by his son David in the old Nantinan churchyard Co. LIM dates his death as 1789, age 56 (c1733.) He was either the son or grandson of Peter, the original immigrant. Philip was a freeholder in Ballingrane and on the 1766 census of Protestants, 4 in the family. One of these children was probably David. The other may have been Elizabeth (Sutliff) who had 4 children baptised in Co. TIP in the 1790's.

At least 5 other children belong to Philip: Agnes, Mary, Catherine, Michael and J. Since Michael and J. were born as late as 1786 and 1789, they may be children of a second marriage. (Their brother David's first child was born 1800-03.) All except Mary went to New York State; Catherine returned to Ireland, leaving her son John Shoemaker in the US.

H1. David Smeltzer (bef 1766- ) (wife not known)

David and Adam Smeltzer signed a declaration opposing the repeal of the Act of Union in 1830. Whether this was David Sr. or his son David and another son (Arnold ?) is not known. David's oldest son Philip, born 1800-03, joined the British Army in 1821. David is also the father of Arnold Smeltzer of Lenawee Co., MI, USA, according to the Coleman Family Bible (Interlaken, NY.) Since Arnold has been proved a brother of David and Margaret Smeltzer of Tecumseh, MI, they, too, are children of David.

H11. Philip Smeltzer (c1800/03-1845) m Mary Andrews (1808-1859)

Eldest son of David Sr. and grandson of Philip (1733) of Ballingrane, young Philip was born about 1803 in Nantinan Parish (army record.) In Dec. 1821, at age 18, he volunteered for HM 21st Reg. of Fusiliers, rose from private to sergeant. His military career spanned nearly 24 years, 14 in foreign service: West Indies 4 yrs., Van Dieman's Land (Tasmania) 6 yrs. and East Indies 4 yrs. Suffering from chronic rheumatism, varicose veins and declining strength, he applied for a discharge for disability, granted at Chatham Aug. 1845, age 45 (b 1800?) He and his wife and their 4 children, born abroad, returned to her home town of Woolavington, SOM. When Philip died 18 Jan. 1848, the cause of death was listed as "a visitation from God!"

Philip's army record describes him as 5'5", fresh complexion, blue eyes, fair hair (a typical Smeltzer profile!) For voluntary enlistment he received a bounty of 3 pounds British and half a crown after taking the oath of fidelity. Recruits were required to declare that they were not and never had been members of the militia. Two years after enlistment Philip was promoted to drummer, 3 years later reduced to private for 3 years, then promoted to corp. for 2, sgt. for 7, col. sgt. for 2 and canteen sgt. (mess) at his request, for 3. At his discharge he received a modified pension for disability and a character and conduct rating of "very good." Still due him were one pair of boots, one coatee and one pair of cloth trousers!

On his tour of duty in England he met and married Mary Andrews of Woolavington about 1828. His son David was born in Ireland about 1831 ('61 census.) His second son Philip was born in Van Dieman's Land and baptised in St. David's Parish, Hobart Town (bp reg.) From 1839 to 1844 the regiment was in India. A daughter Maria was born in Dinapore in 1842, Ann Victoria in Kamptee in 1844, shortly before the family returned to England.

Woolavington census records show that Mary Andrews was a shopkeeper and landed proprietor in Enmore. In 1851 she was 48 (c1803), living in Woolavington with her two daughters, 6 and 9. Rev. Henry Fowle, curate of Woolavington, was a lodger. Her daughter Maria, who did not marry, died in 1877 in Woolavington, left her estate to her sister Ann Victoria (will.)

Special appreciation to Mark Dillon of NSW for his extensive research on Philip, the soldier.

H111. David Smeltzer (1831- ) m Ann Coombs (1838- )

David, eldest son of Philip, born in Ireland in 1831, married Ann Coombs of Burnham, Somerset, born c1838 ('61 census.) He was a painter, plumber, decorator and glazier (Bus. Dir.) Five children were born in Somerset from 1860 to 1866: Sidney Philip, Emily, Alice, Philip Edward and Mary A.

Sidney Philip, the eldest, became a locomotive boilersmith for the railway, married Alice Hobbs of Burnham. Their first son Arthur was born in 1882 in Burnham; John, Florence May, Elizabeth Anne in Wimbledon; Albert William in Burnham; Alice and Bertie in Wimbledon. Wimbledon birth certificates show four different addresses on the same road. They may have been terrace houses for railway employees. No Smeltzer marriages have been found in five Wimbledon C. of E. churches.

H112. Philip Smeltzer Jr. (1836-1909) m Anne Flynne (1841-1898)

Second son of Philip the soldier, Philip Jr. was born in Tasmania and returned to Australia in 1857 at age 20, taking advantage of assisted passage. Arriving in Sydney, NSW, he continued on to Mudgee. There he married Anne Flynne in Jan. 1859 at the RC Church in Mudgee. Later he became a vigneron (wine grower), naming his vineyards"Enmore" after his old home. He had four daughters. When his eyesight began to fail in his old age, he wished to return to England. His daughter Annie, however, preferred to remain in NSW and marry Tom Dillon.

Philip's will, made 2 Aug. 1909, a few weeks before his death, left his entire estate to his friend and housekeeper Emily Jane Bride a.k.a. Emily Jane Lawson, a spinster. Philip signed with an X because he was in bed, too ill to write. He died at Allandale 20 Sept. 1909, age 72.

H114. Ann Victoria Smeltzer (1844-1887) m George Haggett

Born in Kamptee, India in 1844, Ann Victoria married George Haggett of Woolavington at age 20 in 1864. When her eldest son Hedley Philip Smeltzer Haggett was married in 1886 to Eleanor Chamberlin in Wales, an announcement appeared in the Tecumseh, MI (USA) Herald. It noted that Hedley was a nephew of Margaret Smeltzer West of Tecumseh. Margaret was, in fact, an aunt of Ann Victoria, Hedley her gr-nephew. Descendants of Ann Victoria still live in Somerset.

H12. Arnold Smeltzer (1805-1871) m Maria Neal (1820-1899)

Emigrating at age 26, Arnold, son of David (H1) landed at Quebec 15 May 1831. That fall he made his way to Seneca Co., NY with the proverbial dollar in his pocket. His uncle Michael had arrived there in 1819. In 1837 Arnold moved on to eastern Michigan. In a few years he returned to Seneca Co. where in 1842 he married Maria Neal, daughter of Elizabeth & Isaac Neal, son of a Rev War veteran. After their marriage Arnold and his wife went to Lenawee Co., MI. He had come into possession of a hotel in Ridgway as payment of a loan, later exchanged it for land in Macon Twp.and finally settled in Raisin Twp. The name Arnold is unique among Smeltzers - possibly the maiden name of his mother.

Arnold became a prosperous farmer, also dealt in real estate. On 29 Dec. 1871, age 66, he died intestate in Medina Twp.

His assets of $26,900 included 346 acres in Raisin Twp. valued at $20,000. His widow Maria and son Michael were appointed administrators. Maria received 1/3, their four children 2/3. (An infant died in 1843.) Personal property, including farm equipment and livestock,was put up for auction 2 Oct. 1872. A burial plot in Brookside Cemetery, Tecumseh, was purchased by Arnold's widow and her sister-in-law Margaret Smeltzer West on 5 Feb. 1872.

After Arnold's death Maria lived in Tecumseh for 10 years where she was a member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church. In 1882 she moved to Detroit, MI to live with her unmarried daughter Margaret. Maria died in Detroit 25 Dec. 1899, age 78 and was buried in Brookside Cemetery. Arnold's son Michael received a legacy of $50 from his gr-uncle Michael of Lodi, NY. After his father's death, Michael purchased the interests of his heirs and built a large residence.

H13. David Smeltzer (1807-1892) not married

Baptised in Co.LIM in 1807, David emigrated to Michigan, USA, remained a bachelor. On 21 Aug. 1865 (deed) he purchased a home in Tecumseh which he and his widowed sister Margaret shared for 30 years. Two years later, in 1867, he made a will (signed X) making his sister sole beneficiary. He died 28 Jan. 1892, age 85. Margaret died 2 days later, leaving no will.

H14. Margaret Smeltzer (1812-1892) m Isaac West (d 1862)

Born 24 Feb. 1812 in Co. LIM, Margaret probably arrived in Michigan in the late 30's or early 40's. On 21 June 1844 she married Isaac West, a former soldier in the British Army. When the Civil War broke out, Isaac enlisted in the 52nd Ohio Reg. and died at Bowling Green 1 Dec. 1862. Isaac may have been a widower. Another Isaac West of Tecumseh, age 30, enlisted in Co. H of the MI Lancers, a cavalry regiment, was mustered out at Detroit in 1862. (The regiment was disbanded by the War Dept.) Since Margaret died without a will and David's executor had also died, Michael Smeltzer, Arnold's son, was appointed administrator. Michael and his sisters shared the assets, chiefly a house and lot on Pearl St., Tecumseh, valued at $800. An inventory of the house furnishings included 52 jars of fruit in the cellar! Margaret was a member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church. Both she and her brother David were buried in Brookside in a plot they had purchased in 1891. In 1892 her husband Isaac West was reinterred in the plot.

H5. MICHAEL SMELZER (1786-1851)
m #1 Mary St. John (1796-1831)
m #2 Abigail Emery (1798-1864)
Lodi, Seneca Co., New York

Why did Michael of Co. Limerick select the little farming community of Covert (later Lodi), New York for his new home? Was it the building of the Erie Canal (1817-1825) or had he heard of the fertile soil and lush pastures from a St. John relative who may have preceded him? Michael purchased acreage on a hilltop overlooking Seneca Lake, became a prosperous farmer and was an ardent supporter of the Methodist Church. Mention of his library in his will indicates he had some education. His children married into many of the neighboring American families: Meeker, Crisfield, Halsey and Townsend.

Michael and his wife Mary St. John arrived in Quebec in 1819 with their 5-year-old son Phillip and continued on to the U.S. In the early 19th century, Quebec was the greatest single port of entry in North America for Irish immigrants. Settlers bound for the U.S. found it cheaper to travel by wooden sailing ships to Canada, then cross by way of Lake Ontario.

"Smelser" is the oldest form of the family name in Ireland. Those in Seneca Co., NY spelled it "Smelzer; their relatives in Tecumseh, MI and in Ireland used "Smeltzer." Born in 1786, Michael is believed to be the son of Philip Smelser, freeholder of Ballingrane, Co. LIM (1733-1789) and a younger brother of David, who erected a memorial to his father in the old Nantinan churchyard near Rathkeale. (Philip may have married twice). Michael's wife was probably of the St. John (Palatine) family on the Southwell estate in Co. LIM. They were married in 1812 when Mary was 16. Their only son Phillip was presumably named for his grandfather.

After the death of Mary in 1831, Michael married Abigail Emery in 1832 and had a daughter Mary. He became a naturalized citizen in 1840. Perhaps he knew in the fall of 1850 he had terminal cancer. He called to his home two friends, Hiram Gulick and his wife Mary, to help him write his will. Gulick later testified that some of the sheets were already written, some instructions dictated by Michael. Michael died six months later in April 1851.

Michael's Will (C#445 proved 4/22/1851)

Michael was meticulous about details. To his wife Abigail and his daughter Mary he gave the 50 acres purchased from William Roberts, to be farmed on shares and the profits divided. If Abigail remarried, the property was to go to Mary, who would then pay her mother $50 a year. If his wife and daughter lived together, they were to have two cows, horse and buggy, harness and cutter. If Abigail lived by herself, she was to have two rooms in the north end of the house, horse and buggy, harness and cow, the keeping of them, firewood prepared for the stove, $100 a year, ten bushels of wheat yearly, a fattened hog, a third fruit and as much bedding and furniture as convenient to keep house, in lieu of her dowry, provided she remained his widow.

To his grandson John Meeker Smelzer he left the residue of land known as Isaac Neal's Sixty and John Chandler's 26 acres, when John became of age. At that time he was to pay his brothers and sisters $1400 over 7 years in 7 equal payments, without interest. His son Phillip was to have use of the property until John came of age. Any surplus profits from wheat in the field was to be divided among his wife, Phillip and Mary.

To Rachel Smelzer Green (relationship not stated) and her heirs Michael bequeathed that part of the house and lot purchased in company with Ucal Howell in Lodi. Rachel was to have, separate from her heirs, $275 without interest, $50 to be paid annually by his son Phillip. Fifty dollars was given to Michael Smeltzer, son of Arnold of Michigan (his great-nephew.) Twenty dollars was set aside for a tombstone for his sister Agnes of Steuben Co., NY, after her death and $20 each to his sisters Mary Gentleman (dec in Ireland) and Katherine Shoemaker, who had returned to Ireland. To his son Phillip he left two volumes of Clark's Commentaries and a Reference Gazeteer - the remainder of his library to his wife and daughter. The Foreign Missionary of the ME Church received $50, the Methodist Bible Society $50. If a sufficient sum remained, his nephew John Shoemaker was to receive $50, together with Michael's wearing apparel, except for his blue overcoat, to be given to Rev. Gideon Osband, of the ME Church. Phillip and Wilmer Starkey were named executors and the will witnessed by Hiram and Mary Gulick. Wilmer Starkey was appointed guardian of Mary, a minor.

H51. Phillip Smelzer (1814-1886) m Matilda Meeker (1813-1890)

Like his father, Phillip was a successful farmer. He, too, became a naturalized citizen in 1840, witnessed by Halsey Sanford and Joseph Swarthout. He was a member of the Methodist Church. His wife Matilda Meeker was born in New Jersey in 1813 (1850 census) probably in Somerset Co. The date of their marriage is not known. Phillip's first son John was born in 1835. Phillip and Matilda had 11 children; three died young. Phillip died in 1886 (will #2098), his wife in 1890. Her will named Peter Lord as executor. (#2149). Michael and his first wife, Phillip, his wife. and their young children are buried in W.Lodi Cemetery.

Phillip lived comfortably. In the 1850 census he had two servants, Richard Waldron 17, probably a farm hand and Elizabeth Gunderson 23. An inventory of his assets included a piano, sewing machine, spinning wheels, library, pictures, chairs, sofas, tables, bedsteads, a music stand, blankets, comforters, feather beds, carpets, cutlery, china in sets of 12 and 20 goblets. Farm equipment specified a carriage, sleigh, farm wagons, farming implements and tools. Livestock consisted of cows, a bull, 72 lambs, 62 ewes, 3 horses and swine. He had promissory notes from relatives totaling $2000 at 6% interest. Total cash and possessions, exclusive of land, came to about $2000 - a fair sum!

H511. Capt. John Meeker Smelzer (1835-1922) m Nancy Ann Halsey (1835-1929)

The oldest son of Phillip became captain of the Onondaga, a 175' 500-passenger & freight steamboat on Seneca Lake. It was owned by the Seneca Lake Navigation Co. When the company moved its headquarters to Geneva, NY in 1884, the Smelzers moved also. In ill health in 1921, John and his wife Nancy Ann Halsey, whom he had married in 1858, moved to Garden City, KS to live with their only surviving daughter Mary Smelzer Halsey. Both John and Nancy died in KS, were buried in Lodi, NY.

H519. Baxter Timothy Smelzer (MD) (1852-1932) m Lucy H. Tracy

Phillip's youngest son became a physician and surgeon. He attended Bedell Seminary, Lima, NY, Syracuse University 1870-72 (Psi Epsilon), Univ. of MI Medical College at Ann Arbor 1872-73 and received his MD from Bellevue Medical College, New York City (now NYU) in 1874. From 1893-95 he represented the 27th District in the New York State Senate. From 1895 to 1901 he was Sec. of the NY State Board of Health and from 1901-07 Consultant to the Board. He was a member of the NY State Medical Society and listed in Who's Who in 1926-27. He married Lucy Huntington Tracy of Elmira in 1876, died in Albany, NY in 1932.

H52. Mary E. Smelzer (1833-1864) m Lewis Meeker (1833-1860)

Mary's mother Abigail wed Michael Biggs, a widower, in 1853. In Feb. of that year Mary was baptised in the ME Church. In Nov., at age 20, she married Lewis Meeker, son of Jacob and Acenath Meeker. He died of typhoid in 1860. Two children, Emery and R.J. (female) are not in the cemetery. They may have been adopted after Mary died in 1864 at age 30. Lewis Jr. appears to have been born posthumously.

H6. J. Smelser (1789-1819)

His full name is not known. Evidence is persuasive that he was a younger brother of Michael. In June 1819 J. Smelser "a native of Ireland not yet established in the area" was engaged in laying out roads near Hector Falls to the head of Seneca Lake. He fell ill and died and was buried nearby in the Seeley family cemetery. A tragic footnote: his son Reuben, age 4, died 2 months later and was buried beside him. The mother of Reuben may have died in Ireland. No connection with the Seeley family has been established.

Michael Smelzer had arrived that same year, 1819, in Lodi with his wife and son. In his will, Michael bequeathed to Rachel Smelzer Green 50 acres, a house which he had purchased in company with Ucal Howell, and a personal income of $50 a year.

Rachel Jane Smelzer, born 1818, died 8 July 1852 (age 34 yrs. 6 mos.) before the estate was settled. Her husband John Green had died. The court appointed her children's "maternal aunt and uncle" Susannah and Ucal Howell as guardians. Six days later they were replaced by Phillip Smelzer as guardian; he was called a cousin (once removed ?). "Maternal aunt and uncle" imply that the Howells were brother and sister of Rachel. They were children of Ucal Howell (1777-1859) and Jane Cristie, his second wife (c1800-1856). (Ucal's first wife Elizabeth died in 1821). J. Smelser may have been a widower, married Jane, a teenager, in NY State. Later Jane married Ucal Howell. Rachel's middle name was Jane, her older daughter was Jane and Phillip Smelzer had a daughter Jane Cristie. Rachel is buried in the Howell Cemetery in Lodi.

The Watkins Express, reviving the story on 24 May 1894, stated that J. Smelser was an uncle of John Meeker Smelzer and Mrs. Warren Hurd (Sarah Smelzer), children of Phillip. Michael had only one son, Phillip, born 1814. J., born 1789, was 3 years younger than Michael. Thus J. is Phillip's uncle, not John's.

When Susannah Howell (born 1828) married Lewis Howell of Southampton in 1854, Lewis Meeker and his wife Mary Smelzer (daughter of Michael) were witnesses. One of Mary's children was "R.J." Meeker (Rachel Jane ?). Ucal C. Howell, Susannah's brother, born in 1826, married Sophia, born in Ireland in 1850. (Was she a Smelzer relative ?)

J. ROBERT SMELTZER (wife not known)
(late 18th Century)

Robert is identified as the father of Mary Ann Smeltzer by her death certificate. She married her cousin Joseph Holmes in 1843 in Kilcooly. Joseph's mother Margaret Smeltzer was a sister of Robert. This places him as a contemporary of other Smeltzers in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. William (M) and Thomas Smeltzer (L) each had a son Robert. A gr-granddaughter of Thomas believes that Mary Ann was a first cousin of Catherine Smeltzer Black, a daughter of Thomas. An "unplaced" Robert, deceased before 1876, had a son Thomas who married in Balingarry, Co. TIP in 1876.

K. MARGARET SMELTZER (1791-1874)
m John Holmes ( - bef 1845-6)

Margaret, sister of Robert, married John Holmes in 1811 in Kilcooly. He was the son of old John Holmes of Three Castles, Co. KIK (1724-1824.) Margaret emigrated to Canada as a widow in the late 1840's with a number of her grown children. Her son Joseph was a Baptist in the ONT census. Perhaps he attended the Baptist school in Kilcooly run by Philip Smeltzer Jr.

N. KATE SMELTZER (1797-1829)
m John Holmes

Kate was a sister of Thomas Smeltzer (L). John Holmes, whom she married about 1818, was of Fethard, Co. TIP. If Margaret (K) and Robert (J) were siblings of Thomas, then they were brother and sister of Kate. Kate's only daughter was Mary Anne; Margaret and Robert each had a daughter Mary Anne.

Holmes

The Holmes family may have come from England to fight with Cromwell. Another legend is that as Quakers they became too independent to suit Cromwell and were forced to leave England. Thomas Homes paid a Hearth Tax for two hearths (one of the better-off inhabitants) in 1666 Hearth Tax Records for Co. TIP. A Holmes in Callan,Co. KIK also paid a Hearth Tax. In Ontario, several branches of Holmes founded Holmesville; other branches settled in townships in Huron and Bruce Cos. Like many families of the period, they frequently married their cousins. Identical names occur in many branches.

L. THOMAS SMELTZER (d 1860's)
m #1 Allicia Finlay (d bef 1821)
m #2 Alice Baldwin (d 1888)

Five Smeltzers tithed in Kilcooly Parish in 1850: Thomas, William, John, Philip Sr. & Jr. Griffith noted 4 families, perhaps combining Sr. & Jr. Philip II, son of Peter, was a contemporary but not a primary occupier.

Thomas, a dairy farmer and lessee on the Barker estate, had a house, office (cow shed) and 35 acres of field and pasture in Renaghmore. He supplied villagers with milk, cream and butter. He leased an acre of land to Mrs. Catherine Archbold. He is not listed in the 1826 Tithe Applotment. Present-day inhabitants believe Philip Sr. lived with Thomas in later years. (His son ?) They shared a pew in the 1829 Kilcooly Church.

An ardent churchman, Thomas was a warden in 1831, signed church minutes in 1831 & 1832. In a book of local anecdotes (c1852) Records of Moyarcharkey and Two-mile Borris "Tommy Smelzer" is said to have referred to Gladstone as "an auld schemer" because he advocated disestablishment of the Church. Walking by the Protestant Church one day, he pointed to the steeple exclaiming "Ha, Gladstone has taken a shake out of you!" Like most of those in the predominantly Protestant townlands "on the hill," Thomas probably did not suffer during the Great Famine of 1848. The thrifty Palatines had stores of grain, kept livestock and raised diversified garden produce.

Thomas was married twice, first in 1819 in the Diocese of Kildare to Allicia Finlay (Mar Index). There were two other Finlay marriages in Kildare: Margaret to John Smeltzer Sr. in 1826 and Susan (John Sr.'s 2nd wife) to George Jones in 1832 (Mar Index.) Only one wife, Alice Baldwin, was known to Thomas' children. A daughter Susannah was born in 1821 (tombstone.)

Alice Baldwin may be related to John Baldwin, pewholder in the 1829 church. There were a number of Baldwins in Co. Cork. In 1789 Catherine Baldwin signed a marriage settlement with George Beamish of Clogheen, a younger son of Richard Beamish of Castlemore. (George was a pre-publication subscriber to the Jackson Bible of 1793, printed in Dublin.) Catherine Baldwin was the daughter of Henry Baldwin, JP of Old Court, Co. Cork. Baldwins are listed in Burke's Landed Gentry. There may have been a family connection. Thomas' granddaughter Caroline Smeltzer married Thomas Beamish.

Although Thomas had more property than any of the other Smeltzers, all of his children left home. Susannah married James Tate, went with him to India when he joined the East India Corps. After his death in 1856 she married George Taylor, a young bandmaster in the EIC. When George retired they emigrated to W. Australia and established a large farm called "Kilcooly."

A daughter Catherine, 12 years younger than her sister, was born about 1833. She emigrated to Canada in the 1850's, there married James Black in 1858. They farmed in two Ontario counties, Dakota Territory (USA) and in 1902, with their grown children, pioneered in W. Australia. Ann Smeltzer, who witnessed Catherine's marriage, may be another daughter (not known to the family.) A gr-granddaughter of Thomas believes Catherine emigrated in company with Mary Ann Smeltzer Holmes, a first cousin. If correct, Mary Ann's father Robert and her husband's mother Margaret Smeltzer were siblings of Thomas.

Robert Baldwin Smeltzer, Thomas' son, joined the Royal Irish Constabulary, purchased a farm in Co. Cork when he retired. Robert's daughter Caroline stated in 1932 that there was another son Thomas Jr. who had married Mary Anne Warburton. Thomas Sr. was known to have a sister Kate who had married John Holmes of Fethard about 1818. Kate's son James lived with Thomas after his parents died until he joined the RIC in 1842. Only Catherine and Robert are mentioned in Susannah Taylor's Bible in Australia. Since Susannah and Robert were 16 years apart, there may have been others.

Thomas' birthdate is not known. He "died suddenly" in the 1860's, a few years after Robert entered the RIC. With no one left to manage the farm, Robert sold it and took his mother to his lodgings in Co. Cork. She continued to live with him after his marriage in 1880, died in 1888. Thomas may lie under an eroded stone in Kilcooly, his wife in Rathcormuc.

L1. SUSANNAH SMELTZER (1821-1911)
m #1 James Tate (1828-1856)
m #2 George Taylor (1832-1914)
Chittering Valley, Western Australia

The Taylor children loved to confound their Australian schoolmates by revealing that they had been born in India! Susannah came to Perth, W AUS, after a life of leisure in India, where servants were a way of life. As George prepared to retire from the army, in his early 50's, he did considerable research on Australia and decided on the Perth area for his home.

Susannah was the daughter of Thomas Smeltzer, a substantial dairy farmer of Renaghmore, Co. TIP and Alice Baldwin. Her younger sister Catherine married in Canada, emigrated to Australia in 1902. Her brother Robert Baldwin, a sergeant in the Royal Irish Constabulary, retired to a farm in Co. Cork.

Born in 1821 (tombstone), Susannah was first married to James Tate, a farmer of Dundrum, Co. TIP, son of James, on 5 Nov. 1846. Wit: Thomas Smeltzer & James Barrer. (James Barrer married Ellen Tate in 1843.) East India Corps records show that James was born in Cashel, Co. TIP about 1828. On 5 June 1851 he enlisted at Clonmel for 12 years service with the EIC. He was described as a laborer of Ballintemple Parish (nr. Dundrum, about 10 mi. from Cashel.) He was 6'1½" with grey eyes, brown hair and a fresh complexion. He arrived in Bombay on the Merchantman in 1852, became a bombadier in 2nd Co., 1st Battalion, Bombay Artillery. Two sons, James Jr. and Thomas, were born in Ireland. Mary Anne (1853) and George (1854) born in Ahmednugga, India, are believed to have died young.

Five years after James entered the Corps he died of abdominal dropsy in 1856, was buried the same day at Back Bay from St. Thomas Cathedral, Bombay. His estate of 195 7/8 pounds was paid to his widow the following year. Susannah remained in India and on 14 June 1858 married George Taylor (then using the name John Evans), a bombadier in the EIC in Bombay. Susannah was some years his senior.

George Taylor

George was born in London 14 Oct. 1832, son of Stephen and Ann Taylor, who kept a public house. A groom at the inn, George did not wish to follow the family business. He ran away from home and enlisted at Southampton 15 Aug. 1856 in the East India Corps under the assumed name John Evans, requesting service in India. He sailed on the Kingston for Bombay 19 Aug. A letter from his mother, written in 1858, indicated that he had written her of his plans but the letter had lain unclaimed for months. Her letter told of her move to 61 Red Lion St., Holborn and the clandestine and unfortunate marriage of his sister. Sarah Ann Taylor married Arthur Craddock, a cellar man and son of a wine merchant on 17 June 1855 at St. Andrews, Holborn, London.

George's musical talent was soon discovered by the EIC. While he could play most wind instruments, his favorite was the bassoon. His piccolo now belongs to Norma Taylor Geddes, a gr-granddaughter. George became bandmaster of the Royal Artillery where he was in charge of the powder supply. On 12 Sept. 1873 he legally resumed his name of Taylor. Two years later he retired from the army after serving 21 yrs. and 8 mos. (The British Army had taken over the EIC.) His pension of 2 shillings a day was hardly enough to continue the family's style of living. They embarked for Western Australia, arriving in Albany in 1875 on the Nubia, a 2096 ton sailing ship, then proceeded to Fremantle at a cost of 9 pounds plus. Susannah's older sons carried the little ones aboard, said goodbye and remained with the army in India. James Jr. became a sgt. in the RA Governor's Band at Gunnesh Khind, married in 1879. His son James III remained in Bombay also. (India Office records.) When Thomas wrote that he planned to marry an East Indian girl Susannah cut off all correspondence. Anglo-Indian marriages were frowned on by the army and records poorly kept.

The Taylor's first home was in Swan Valley in Bassendean (W. Guildford) in a cottage available to soldiers who were being resettled. They next purchased a home in Upper Swan (E. Bullsbrook) about 25 mi. north of Guildford. The Darling Range, about 30 miles from Perth, was being opened up and they applied for property there. In time they enlarged their holdings to 2500 acres. They moved into their new home 25 Aug. 1877, named it "Kilcooly" after Susannah's native parish in Co. TIP. The first house had a thatched roof. A second and larger house with 7 rooms was built in 1895. Their grandchildren recall it as a "pretty place," built of sun-dried mud bricks (from local brick mud) and pit-sawn timbers, surrounded by an orchard and flower gardens.

Susannah knew more about farming and animal husbandry than George. She led in organizing the farm, clearing fields for hay, planting wheat, stone fruit, orange trees and grape vines.

The high hills were more suitable for sheep than for grain. George remained the commanding soldier, socializing at the Rose & Crown in Bullsbrook, an inn built in 1840 and still in use. Among his cronies George soon discovered several who played musical instruments. He organized the first brass band in Guildford, which performed from 1876 to the 1880's. After his death, a tin trunk was found that contained individual band parts for every instrument. (They were thrown away!) Susannah died at "Kilcooly" 1 Oct. 1911, age 90. George died at the Royal Perth Hospital 22 Aug. 1914. Both are buried at St.Mary's, Middle Swan.

The Next Generation

George willed his estate to his younger son Robert who had built a home nearby. Other family members purchased adjacent fields, totalling about 4500 acres. Stephen George, the older son, devoted his life to farming. Robert's son Jim, who lives in Perth, manages the old farm. A son Bill and his son Eric have a farm "Ladyspring" nearby. It includes a hilltop overlooking the Swan River with a helicopter landing strip for aerial crop dressing. A stone cairn marks a trig (starting) point established by Sir John Forrest in his original survey of the area.

Stephen George and Robert married sisters, Ada May and Mena Helena Caporn, an old Australian family of Huguenot origin. When Robert's sons Fred and Ted started school they walked 3 miles, got a lift from a neighbor for the next 4! At one time there were 15 Taylors (double cousins) in the local school.

Daughter Sarah Anne became a nurse and midwife, assisting in the delivery of most of her nephews and nieces at her home in Bayswater, near Perth. In 1860 she married William Robert Wylde, a gardener, who had emigrated from England as a child. Sarah called their home "Kirkee" after her childhood home in India. The Taylors' daughter Alice Elizabeth, a spastic, lived to be 93.

Robert spent most of his life on the farm. Part of his income came from wild brumbies (horses) which he caught in the bush, broke in and sold to city markets. His sons Fred and Ted tried farming in the wheat belt nr Beacon, n.e. of Perth. The steadily declining price of wheat in the 30's and 40's forced them and thousands of others off the land, abandoning machinery and livestock. With that inner strength possessed by so many pioneers, they succeeded in other careers.

Note: Military records in the India Office Library were researched by Dr. R.Brian Holmes of Toronto, ONT. Fred Taylor of Tuart Hill, W AUS and Norma Taylor Geddes of Lane Cove, NSW loaned valuable family papers.

L2. CATHERINE JANE SMELTZER (1833-1928)
m James Black (1827-1919)
Ontario - Dakota - Western Australia

Catherine emigrated to Ontario soon after 1851 (she is not in the census), perhaps in company with her cousin Mary Ann Smeltzer Holmes. Catherine's age varies in census records; the likely date 22 Apr. 1833 is stitched into a piece of her fancy work owned by Delina Black Squibb. Catherine was the daughter of Thomas, a dairy farmer of Kilcooly and Alice Baldwin. Her sister Susannah married twice, lived in India, then W. Australia with her husband George Taylor. Her brother Robert, a sergeant in the RIC, retired to Co. Cork.

On 8 Nov. 1858 Catherine was married to James Black in E. Garafraxa, Wellington Co. ONT (Early Mar. Reg.) by Rev. Matthew S. Gray, a Primitive Methodist minister. Wit: Ann Smeltzer (may be a sister) and David Carroll. James gave his age as 27. He was probably born in Co. Cavan or Co. Armagh, one of four children of John Black, a weaver (1771) and Elizabeth Nelson (1791), married in 1812. The family moved to Ontario when James was 8. In the 1851 census, James 22 was living with Mr. & Mrs. Thomas Reid as a farm laborer. In the 1900 census in ND, he was 73 (c1827) married 40 years, non-citizen, unable to read or write. Catherine age 64 (Apr. 1836) was literate.

After their marriage the Blacks lived on CON XIX Lot 8E, E. Garafraxa, as renters. ('61 Agric. census.) Their farm was near Catherine's cousins Dora and Thomas Smeltzer. A son John, age 4 in the '61 census, apparently died before 1868 when another son was named John. The first John is not recorded in the family Bible. The Blacks attended the Presbyterian Church in Orangeville. James was a member of the Orange Lodge there. Four more children were born in Wellington Co., Elizabeth Alice and Mary Jane, both baptised in the Primitive Methodist Church by Rev. McKay and followed by Thomas and a second Elizabeth Alice (1866.)

A year or two later the Blacks moved to Bruce Co. In May 1868 James received a loan for the purchase of 100 acres in Brant Twp. CON VIII Lot 15 and acquired a Crown Patent in 1874. The land near the old Solway PO was valued at $850. A second son named John was born in 1868 in Walkerton, 6 mi. south. Joseph, Rupert and Samuel were born in Walkerton or Greenock. On the 1871 assessment rolls James had wheat, hay, horses, cattle, sheep, swine, wool, cheese and cord wood. He was becoming prosperous. The 1880 Bruce Co. Atlas listed him as both a gentleman and a farmer. Fifty acres had been cleared and the land valued at $2100 in 1881. Two years later James sold the farm on 23 June 1883 to John McGuire and headed west (Land Reg.)

Dakota Territory, USA

The Blacks entered the US in 1883 (1900 census) settling first in Pembina Co., Dakota Ter. James' first purchase was west of Hamilton: W½ NE¼E½ NW¼ Section 6, Twp 161 n of Range 54W (160 acres) on 18 Apr. 1885 from Henry & Annie Schnell for $100(Bk K pg. 534.) He sold it back to Henry Schnell 27 Oct. 1886 for the same $100 (Bk O, pg 237, Pembina Co.) That may be the year he moved to Cavalier Co.

Note: A quarter section is 160 acres. Range and Township are surveyor terms indicating distance from the principal meridian (PM).) Cavalier Co. consists of Ranges 57-64, Townships 159-163 and a fractional 164S.

During the years in Dakota, James & Catherine Black received the following deeds and patents:

1. Warranty deed 4 June 1895 from Adolph H. Knoche of Chicago for $2500 NE¼-21-163-59 (Bk C pg 462). W½ was deeded back to Knoche 23 Nov. 1898 (Bk N pg 195); E½ was lost by mortgage foreclosure, sheriff's deed 8 June 1900 to Mary E. Dorr (Bk N pg 444.)
2. US Patent 26 Dec. 1893 for N½-SW¼-15-163-59 Homestead Cert. #3435 (Bk J pg 390.) Deeded to Florence M. Dickson 9 Nov. 1901 (Bk W pg 195)
3. Timber Culture Patent #590 4 Sept. 1895 for SE¼-21-163-59 (160 acres.) (Bk M pg 239.) Deeded to Wilbur L. Drury 30 Nov. 1901 (Bk T pg 183.)

Sons were eligible to acquire land at 21, daughters at 16. Many did so to add to the size of the family farm or to provide themselves with an income or dowry. Mary Jane Black did dressmaking. Elizabeth Alice enlarged photographs with crayon in a photographer's shop in town. Their farms were managed by the men.

Mary J. Black:

1. US Patent 20 Feb. 1901 for SE¼-17-163-59 (Bk U pg 152)

Elizabeth A. Black:

1. Warranty deed 4 June 1895 from Adolph H. Knoche for S½-SW¼-15 & N½-NW¼-22-163-59 (Bk C pg 444.)
2. US Patent 8 May 1901 for S½-NW¼-22-163-59 (Bk B pg 141.)

Thomas James Black:

1. US Patent 8 Mar. 1895 for NW¼ SW¼-21-163-59 (Bk J pg 170.) Conveyed to James Black & wife as sole heirs 25 Apr. 1899 (Bk W pg 226.) A mortgage had been made with Farmer's Trust Co. for $400 4 June 1895. Sheriff's sale 8 June 1901 to Sue E. Atwater for $558.45 (Bk N pg 465.)
2. Warranty deed 4 June 1895 from Adolph H. Knoche for N½-SW¼-21-163-59 (Bk C pg 454.) NE¼ mortgaged 4 June 1895 for $320. Sheriff's sale for delinquent taxes 21 May 1901 to Julia N. Jackson for $494.59 (Bk N pg 464.)

Rupert Black:

1. US Patent 12 Oct. 1900 for NW¼-SW¼-27-, N½ SE¼ and SE¼-28-169-59 (160 acres.) Homestead Cert. #5325 (Bk 14 pg 239.) Deeded to James Field 5 June 1901 (Bk T pg 622)

West Hope Twp. 163, Range 59, was surveyed in 1883 by James E. Dike. On a map of the township, Rita Maisel, a teacher of Langdon, penciled in for her 6th graders the holdings of the early settlers including the Blacks, the Ridleys (Rupert's grandfather-in-law ), the Bottrells (Rupert's father-in-law), the Cemetery, Presbyterian Church and Zion ME Church.

Three of the Black's sons died: Joseph in Bruce Co. ONT, John in Pembina Co. and Thomas in Cavalier Co. ND. No tombstones have been located. The Elkwood Presbyterian Church, which the Blacks probably attended, closed in 1915-20, later burned down. Some stones in the churchyard are illegible. Many settlers used wood markers that soon decayed, or they buried children on the family farm. In 1900 the census noted that the Blacks had had 8 children, 4 living. (The first John was not counted.) While living in Cavalier Co. the Blacks adopted a daughter Florence Watson, born in Dakota in 1886.

L27. Rupert Black (1874-1952) m Mary Anna Bottrell (1883-1954)

Rupert was the only son to marry. His bride was Mary Anna (Polly) Bottrell, who lived with her maternal grandparents Joseph and Dorothy Topping Ridley in the same township. The Ridleys were born in England in 1836, married about 1855. They entered the US from Canada in 1882 (1900 census.) They and their sons became naturalized citizens in 1882 (census). Their daughter Jane married Phillip Bottrell, born in Listowel, ONT 2 Apr. 1858. They had 3 children, all born in Dakota: Mary Anna (1883), Joseph (1885) (1885 Ter. census) and David (1886.) On 27 May Phillip sold 80 acres of his holdings, encumbered by a mortgage of $364, for $80 to Margaret Ferguson (Bk B pg 141.)

The Bottrell children were orphaned at an early age. Phillip died of typho-malarial fever in 1887; his wife Jane died of pneumonia in Mar. 1889. They were buried in Elkwood Cemetery. The grieving little girl was taken by her grandmother to visit relatives in Canada. When they returned, Polly went to live with the Ridleys. She was 2 mos. short of 16 when she married Rupert Black (Mar Cert.) Her grandfather signed his consent 2 Aug.1899. They were married at the Ridley home in Elkwood on 10 Aug. 1899 by Rev. D. McMillan, Presbyterian minister. Rupert's birthday!

In the 1900 census Rupert and his wife were living on a farm of their own. David Bottrell, 14, was living with William Baker (a farm near his uncle William Ridley) and attending school. Joseph Bottrell, 15, was a servant in the household of Hamilton Howatt. About 1918 the brothers went to Ochre River, MAN and started a cattle ranch. The venture was not particularly successful. David died there in the 1940's of a bullet wound. Joseph remained in Ochre River, had 11 children.

Rupert's first child Delina was born in 1900. Polly planned to register the birth in the spring when the snow was gone; by that time the family was making plans to go to Australia.

Move to Western Australia

Some Dakota farmers had gone to Alaska seeking gold. A gold rush was on in Australia. Some think Rupert was lured by gold; others recall he complained of the bitter winters in Dakota. James may have been discouraged by foreclosures on his lands and the loss of two sons in Dakota. Perhaps Catherine's sister in Western Australia wrote encouraging letters. Catherine was nearly 60, James 73; they may not have wished to be left behind.

Travel was probably by rail to Spokane with a change there for Vancouver. Elkwood was midway between the CPR and the Gt. Northern. At Vancouver the Blacks embarked on the Miowera, a 3393 ton 3-masted schooner built in 1892 in Newcastle and owned by the New Zealand Shipping Co. She carried 60 paying passengers (infants not counted.) (Lloyd's Reg. 1902)

While the Blacks were still in Elkwood, William Thomas Moore, twice-widowed and with 3 children, had seen a picture of "Lizzie" and determined to meet her. When he did, her plans for Australia were made. He followed her on the same ship and by the time they reached Sydney had persuaded her to marry him. His children came out with Mary Jane Black the following year.

En route to Sydney a second daughter was born to Polly as the ship lay in Honolulu Harbor. Named Miowera for the ship she quickly became "Myra." The Miowera arrived in Sydney, NSW on 7 Jan. 1902; the passengers disembarked the following day. The passenger list (Ship Arrivals, Battye Library, Perth) shows Mr. & Mrs. E. Black (Rupert Edward), Miss L. (Lizzie), Mr. S.(Samuel), Mr. & Mrs. J. Black (James). Between the names of Samuel and James are Mr. Wm. Moore (who married Lizzie), Mr. Watson and Mr. D.E.Brown. Could Mr. Watson be an error for Florence Watson, the adopted daughter? She was only 15 and still at school. Delina does not recall she emigrated. Rupert took along his dog Pete!

Mr. & Mrs. Black are next listed on the Franklin, a coastal vessel which they had boarded at Hopetown 3 Mar. 1902 and disembarked at Albany, chief port for W AUS on 7 Mar. 1902 (pas list NSW Archives.) From there they went to Guildford where the George Taylors had a cottage. There was no wharf at Fremantle; the Swan River simply flowed down from Perth to the sea. Polly spoke of "sin, sadness, sand and sore eyes" as she stepped ashore.

The Katanning District was being opened when the Blacks arrived. Rupert took up land at Cartmeticup, his parents nearby at Woodanilling. The price was low because of York Road poison, fatal to sheep. It had to be pulled out by hand. Rupert and his family lived in a tent until he was able to build a 2-room home of tree trunks hung with whitewash-stiffened Hessian bags for walls. They were "papered" with newspapers, earth floors "carpeted" with Hessian. Tin roofs were preferred to thatch because of the danger of fire. They were also useful for collecting rain water. Water was scarce and sometimes so cloudy Polly had to settle it with ashes. To get water from a neighbor was a 2-mile walk. One day Delina tried a divining rod. She found a "soak" that her father then damned up and which never went dry.

Without farm animals at first, Rupert had to walk 16 miles to Katanning for supplies. His resources were soon exhausted and for 3 years he worked for neighboring farmers, coming home only once a fortnight, leaving Polly to run the farm. Food was often bread and drippings, yet Polly never complained. Rupert and Polly had 18 children, including two sets of twins. Three of the babies died at birth or of exposure on the wagon en route to the hospital. They were buried in unmarked graves in a patch of bush about a mile north of the house. Some years later road workers built a cairn to mark the little mounds.

The girls were expected to do the work of grown men, without pay. Delina recalls sowing 365 acres in wheat, lifting the heavy bags of super and seed unaided. At 16 she and Myra sewed up 400 bags of threshed wheat and oats. Rupert did the driving jobs, cutting hay with the binder and stripping the grain.

Once when Myra stayed out after curfew she begged Delina to let her in through the window. Rupert, a strict disciplinarian, learned of it and threatened the girls with a horse whip. What happened? Delina outran him!

All the children inherited James' dark curly hair and blue eyes. The men were over 6' tall, slim in build. Delina remembers her grandmother Catherine as not much over 5'1" with gray eyes and straight brown hair pulled back from her face. Her usual dress was a gray flannel skirt, gray blouse, black shoes and a white apron tied at her waist. Outside she wore a pale blue "gleaner" bonnet as a protection against the sun.

After Lizzie Black and William Moore were married in Sydney, they went to Albany, then Fremantle, then Cartmeticup. After the birth of two children they set up a tearoom at Claremont, near Perth, later returned to Katanning where two more children were born.

Samuel Black remained a bachelor. He took up land at Medicap, 7 mi. from Kendenup, and built a small house of wattle-and-daub. Eventually he expanded his farm "Parklands" to 21 acres. He specialized in potatoes, also grew peaches, apples, grapes and tomatoes. His sister Mary Jane remained with her parents until their death, then kept house for her brother. She wrote to a cousin in Ireland, Caroline Smeltzer Beamish, that she wished Sam would marry! In her letters she usually enclosed a pressed wildflower - as Delina often does!

James died in 1919, Catherine in 1928, age 95. Both are buried in Mt. Barker Cemetery. In 1950 Rupert and Polly moved to town to live with a daughter because of Polly's poor health. On his way to the hospital to visit her, Rupert was struck by a car and fatally injured. He died in 1952, age 78. After his death Polly divided her time between Cartmeticup and Albany. She died at Albany and is buried alongside her husband. Virtually all the descendants of James and Catherine have remained in Australia.

Special appreciation to Delina Black Squibb and the State Historical Society of ND at Bismarck.

L3. Robert B. Smeltzer (1837-1916) m Caroline Armit (d 1916)

Enlisting in the RIC in the late 1850's, Robert rose to sergeant. This semi-military force was formed in 1816 and disbanded in 1922. When his father died a few years after he joined the force, Robert sold the farm and took his mother to Co. Cork. He remained a bachelor until he was 43.

At Clonkilty on the south coast of Cork he met and married Caroline Sophia 28 Oct. 1880. In the next 20 years they had 10 children. When he retired, he purchased a farm called "The Mountain Lodge" at Rathcormuc, Co.Cork near Fermoy. He and his wife both died in 1916 and are believed buried in the old Protestant Cemetery in Rathcormuc. A number of their children continued to live on the family farm. It was sold in 1925 and another purchased in Creaden, Dunmore East, Co. Waterford by Caroline Smeltzer, her husband Thomas Beamish, John, Naomi and Georgina Smeltzer. Their sister Susannah lived with the Daunts.

Caroline Sophia Armit - a Huguenot Descendant

Caroline was the third daughter of Capt. John Armit of the 47th Foot, British Army and a granddaughter of Sir John Armit of Newtown Park, Dublin. Capt. John's brother Robert, RN, was lost at sea. The Armit daughters were educated on the continent. Caroline's older sister Naomi became the matron of a hospital in London. Her sister Georgina lived in the family home. Capt. Armit opposed his daughter's marriage and cut her off. Eventually Robert wrested a substantial dowry from his father-in-law, enabling him to settle large dowries on his own two daughters. Relations with the Armits were cool and infrequent.

The Armits were a distinguished Huguenot family said to be descended from the Count and Countess of Rheims, who fled to England following the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. Their lifestyle indicates that they took their fortune with them. Caroline's grandfather, Sir John Armit, contributed the building of St. John's Sandymount Anglican Church in Dublin.

L31. Frances Alice Smeltzer (1882-1972) m George Daunt (1875 - )

Robert's oldest daughter was born at Clonkilty, lived for a time at Ballineen where she went to the same school attended by her husband George Daunt of Inniskean 6 years earlier. Mother of 11 sons and 3 daughters, she died in 1972, age 90. The "Dauntless Daunts" (so captioned by a newspaper article about their military exploits) carried on the Armit tradition. Nine of the 14 served in WW II: 2 in the Army, 5 in the Royal Navy (one as chaplain), one in the RAF and a daughter in the ATS. Only one failed to return. Alice & George Daunt lived in Midleton, Co. Cork and are buried in St. John the Baptist churchyard.

L34. Caroline Smeltzer (1885-1967) m Thomas Beamish (1883-1961)

Caroline Sophia married Thomas Beamish. The Beamish family, thought to come from East Anglia, were among the landed gentry in the 19th century. Caroline had 5 daughters now living in England and Scotland and 3 sons. Three daughters were nursing sisters during WW II. A son Robert Baldwin Beamish continued the family's military tradition, serving with the RN in the Mediterranean. In 1949 he transferred to the Australian Navy, serving aboard the aircraft carrier Sydney. The family moved to Nowra, NSW in 1950. He retired as Lt. Commander after 14 years, died in 1971. Caroline kept up a correspondence with cousins in Australia, Samuel and Mary Jane Black. Years later her son Robert found Nell Taylor Reeve, a granddaughter of Susannah Smeltzer Taylor and visited her when his ship was in Fremantle.

Beamish vs. Smeltzer - 1930-34

In 1931 Caroline Beamish claimed a share in the estate of George W. Holmes of Co. Cork, an eccentric sea captain who died intestate in 1930. His grandmother Kate Smeltzer, a sister of Caroline's grandfather Thomas, had married John Holmes about 1818. Caroline was appointed administratrix and presented genealogical evidence to support her claim and that of her siblings. (See Rightful Heirs of George W. Holmes.) Caroline died in 1967.

L39. John Smeltzer (1895-1959) m Mary McCarthy (1902-1982)

Three of Robert's sons died in early manhood. John remained a bachelor, working the family farm, until he was 42. In 1937 he married Catholic-born Mary McCarthy of Creaden in Plymouth, Devon. Irish opposition to mixed marriages forced them to go to England where their only daughter Catherine was born. They returned to Dublin in 1953; John died there in 1959.

M. WILLIAM SMELTZER (late 18th cent.)
m Mary Bible
Cos. Tipperary - Kildare - Meath

William is the common ancestor of one of the most widely dispersed Smeltzer branches. Descendants live in England, Ireland, No. Ireland, Australia, New Zealand, So. Africa, Scotland and Wales. A contemporary of John Sr. (C1), Philip Jr. (C2) and Thomas (L), he is either a brother or first cousin. An unplaced Daniel in Co. TIP may be a brother.

A warden in 1835 in the Kilcooly Church and leasor of three pieces of land, he moved on to Cos. Kildare and Meath where his children were born. Seven sons and two daughters have been identified: John, William Sr., Peter, Daniel Sr., Robert, Edward, Thomas, Mary Ann and Catherine. Edward's family Bible (Mullingar, Co.Meath) includes Thomas and the girls, not the older boys.

Australian marriage records of William's son Thomas show that William was a carpenter, his wife Mary Bible. Irish marriage certificates prove that John, Daniel Sr. and William Sr. were sons of William, the elder. Sisters Ann and Sarah Scales and their brother William, children of Richard Scales, all married Smeltzers. Four first cousins, sons of Daniel,Robert, Peter and Mary Ann were named Richard! A William living with Robert in 1882 (St. Helens Electoral Rolls) was probably his father. He may have returned to Ireland when Robert moved to Middlebrough. Sons who remained in Ireland were William Sr., a groom, Peter, a smith and Edward,a stationmaster known for his station gardens.

English Smeltzers

Three of William's sons John, Daniel Sr. and Robert crossed the Irish Sea to St. Helens, LANC (now Merseyside), 12 mi. from Liverpool. In the late 60's and 70's it was a burgeoning industrial area. John and Daniel first appeared on the Electoral Rolls of St.Helens in 1870. John lived at No. 32 Graham St., Robert at No. 34 and their brother-in-law James Scales at No. 30.

M1. John Smeltzer (1840-1892) m Frances Cole (1840 - )

John may have been the eldest son. His birthdate is estimated as 1840 from the '81 census (age 40.) His brother William was born about 1841 according to his age at death in the records at Harold's Cross, Dublin. On 19 Jan. 1865 John married Frances Cole (Coyle) age 20, a servant, in Poinstown Ch., Co. Meath. Wit: Richard Wahler & George Stokesbury. Her father was a basketmaker. In the '81 St.Helens census John was a widower, his daughter Mary Frances, age 15 (c1866). John worked in a colliery, died of cancer 7 Apr. 1897. His daughter married James Fitzhenry, son of a shepherd, 1 Aug. 1892 at Holy Cross RC Ch. She died while her children were young. There are still Fitzhenrys in St. Helens.

Living with John in St. Helens was William Smeltzer, a chemical laborer who died of scarlatina 28 May 1896, age 32. The death certificate named John as uncle. In 1864 John had been a witness at the wedding of Thomas Smeltzer of Borris, Co. TIP, son of Daniel, in Littleton Parish Church. That Daniel appears to be a brother of William. (William had a son Daniel.) Thomas of Borris died in 1885 at age 55 and is buried in Littleton Chyrd. (Ch.Reg.) William of St. Helens, born 1864-5 may be Thomas' son.

M4. Daniel Smeltzer Sr. (1845-1915) m Ann Scales ( - 1898)

Born in Kildare in 1845, Daniel is described as tall, brown-eyed and with a dark beard. He married Ann Scales, daughter of Richard, in Poinstown Ch. Co. Meath 19 June 1867. Wit: James Scales & Gerard Stokesbury. When Daniel emigrated to England he carried a letter of recommendation stating that he was "a good workman." His oldest son Daniel Jr. was born in 1869; 4 more children were born in St. Helens. Daniel was on the Electoral Rolls in 1878-9 and again in 1882-1885. He returned to Ireland for a period during which two more children were born. He may have worked for a time on the estate of Lord Kildare. Family tradition is that Daniel had a part in building the Irish State Coach. During WW I Daniel and his son James (born in Ireland) were required to register as aliens, to their dismay. Daniel died in 1915, his wife in 1898. All their children except Daniel Jr. remained in England.

M41. Daniel Smeltzer Jr. (1869-1944) m Maud Molyneux (1878 - )

Daniel and Maud were married in a double ceremony in 1896 at Holy Trinity, C.of E., with his sister Annie who married Edward Peterson. Five children were born in St.Helens. There he worked at Varley's Iron Foundry and joined the Engineering Association, trying to improve the conditions of the workers. For his activities he was dismissed and found himself blacklisted by the industry. In 1912 he went to Belfast where he worked at Harland & Wolff, shipbuilders. Joining the Musgrave Engineering Works as a moulder, he supervised the casting of the gates for St. Anne's Cathedral in Belfast and the hands and face for the Albert Clock. His wife became known as a spiritualist. Their youngest son was born in Belfast.

M45. Joseph Smeltzer (1876-1967) m Elizabeth Hardman ( - 1962)

Enlisting in the So. Lancashire Regiment at 15, Joseph served in India for 12 yrs., becoming officers' mess sergeant. Tradition has it that a local rajah whom Joseph often visited offered one of his daughters in marriage. Joseph chose Elizabeth Hardman, a midwife and retired from active duty. When WW I broke out he rejoined the army and served for 5 yrs. in France in the front-line trenches. His aunt Kate used to send him money on Orangemen's Day to buy a pint to celebrate. He died at age 91, honored by his Regiment.

M5. Robert Smeltzer (c1850-1916) m Sarah Scales (c1854-1925)

In the '81 census Robert was 30 (c1850-51) his wife Sarah 27 (c1854.) Sarah was confirmed at Navan, Co. Meath in 1870. Their oldest son William was born in St. Helens in 1878, two daughters in 1879 and 1883. Robert, a blacksmith,had gone to St.Helens with an Irish partner to start a nail factory. After a few successful years the partner absconded with the firm's funds and Robert was obliged to seek employment elsewhere. Some time before 1887 the family moved to Middlesbrough, No. Yorkshire, where two more sons were born. Robert was then an engine fitter living at 122 High St., Coatham, Redcar, where his daughters continued to live until 1964. On 27 Dec. 1916 Robert died in a tragic chemical accident at the plant. Sarah died in 1925. Both are buried in Coatham. Contact with the St. Helens' relatives was lost.

Hounded by police during WW I because of their German-sounding name, the family claimed Dutch ancestry. Father and sons were ardent Orangemen. Robert Jr. established an insurance business in Newcastle-on-Tyne, Richard was associated with the railway (freight) and traveled extensively. Their uncle James Scales emigrated to Australia with his daughter May and her husband after the death of his wife Alice.

Australian Smeltzers

The Smeltzer name was carried to Queensland by Thomas, William's youngest son. Australian records confirm his birth in Kill Parish, Co. Kildare. Half a world away, his name and that of his first daughter Sabina are in the family Bible of his brother Edward. His grandchildren were unaware of their Irish-Palatine heritage until a search for them began in 1982.

M7. Thomas Smeltzer Sr. (1857-1927) m #1 Mary Ann Clisham ( - 1891); m #2 Emily Jane Kelly (1867-1952)

When Thomas arrived in Brisbane in 1883 he was single, 25 and a gardener. The Scottish Admiral left London 18 May, arrived in Brisbane 19 Aug., a 3 months voyage. He may have taken advantage of assisted passage offered by the government.

A year after his arrival, he married Mary Ann Clisham in 1884, daughter of Peter Clisham and Margaret McCann. They had two children, Sabina and Thomas Jr. Mary Ann died in 1891, her son the next year. On 8 Feb. 1892 Thomas Sr. married Emily Jane Kelly 29. She was a domestic servant, born in Kirkpatrick, Isle of Man, daughter of Margaret & John Kelly, a sailor. Both lived on Hope St. in the old part of Brisbane. They had 5 children. When the family was growing up, Thomas was a ganger (crew boss) on the railway being built across the outback. He died in 1927, age 76, his wife Emily in 1952, age 85.

M75. Thomas Smeltzer Jr.(1896-1977) m Elizabeth Loague (1900-1951); m #2 May Parker Harding

The second Thomas Jr. was born 20 Oct. 1896 at James St., Paddington, in the Enoggera District. When patriotic fervor swept Australia in 1914, young Thomas joined up at 18 and served for the duration of the war until 1918. He had enlisted in the Machine Gunners, served most of the war years with the 5th Light Horse, recognized by their distinctive emu feathers in their hats. He was in the cavalry charge at Beersheba in the Middle East. After the war he was involved in the pastoral and meat industry.

In 1921 he married Elizabeth May Loague, daughter of John Mackay Loague and Florence Connell of Londonderry. She was born in Brisbane in 1900, died in 1951. They had 4 children. When his sister Sabina married, Thomas objected to her husband's German background and ceased contact. After the death of his first wife he married May Parker Harding. He died in 1977, age 81.

RIGHTFUL HEIRS OF GEORGE W. HOLMES

The High Court of Dublin approved 13 claimants to the estate of George W. Holmes, grandson of Kate Smeltzer Holmes, in 1934. Was the genealogical evidence correct? Was justice done?

George Holmes, a retired sea captain, died intestate in the Lindville Private Home in Co. Cork in 1930. His home in Fermoy had been fitted out like a ship, with a mast coming through the roof. Born 21 July 1870, he died 10 April 1930. At the time he was of unsound mind. Information about the case, Beamish vs. Smeltzer, has been gathered from affidavits on file in the Public Record Office, Dublin.

George was the grandson of John Holmes of Fethard, who married Kate Smeltzer, a sister of Thomas Smeltzer of Renaghmore, Co. TIP about 1818. Children of John and Kate, as certified by Rev. Richard C. Parten, rector of Fethard were: Thomas (b 27 May 1819), Mary Anne, Johnathon (d May 1829), William, Philip and James Holmes (father of George W.Holmes.)

Kate Smeltzer died at age 32 and was buried at Fethard 9 June 1829. After the death of his parents, James, the only surviving son, went to live with his uncle Thomas Smeltzer and his cousin Robert Baldwin Smeltzer in Renaghmore. James joined the Royal Irish Constabulary on 1 July 1842 and was stationed in Co. Waterford. He married Helena Moye at Kinsale,Co. Cork 13 Aug. 1857. They lived at Patrick St., Fermoy. James died 3 June 1897, Helena 9 Jan. 1903. Their children were:

William Holmes b 1 Sept. 1858; bap 26 Sept.
Kate Holmes b 1 Jan. 1860; bap 19 Feb.; d 25 June 1915; nm
Helena Holmes b 16 Dec. 1861; d young
Mary Anne Holmes b 15 May 1865; d 23 Sept. 1886; nm
George William Holmes b 21 July 1878; d 10 Apr. 1930

Only Kate and George survived their parents. George told members of Robert Smeltzer's family that they were his only relatives. A maternal cousin Edward Moye died in 1904. Kate and George received his estate. George benefitted further when his sister Kate died intestate in 1915. By 1930 his estate was valued at 3000 pounds.

Smeltzer Claims

Fermoy, where George lived, was the market town for Rathcormuc where Robert Smeltzer had purchased a farm when he retired from the RIC. They visited each other frequently. Caroline Smeltzer Beamish, a daughter of Robert, and who had kept in touch with George, was appointed administratrix of Holmes' estate. She and her solicitor submitted detailed affidavits, certificates and pedigrees in support of her claim. Robert died in 1916.

No record was found of her grandfather Thomas' birth or his marriage to Alice Baldwin. Thomas was said to have died suddenly three or four years after his son Robert joined the RIC. With no one left to run the farm, Robert sold it to Peter Miller and took his mother to live with him in Co.Cork where she died 29 Aug. 1888. Robert retired from the constabulary in 1889.

Robert Baldwin Smeltzer was born c1837, died 24 Dec. 1916. He married Caroline Sophia Armit in Co. Cork 28 Oct. 1880. She died 27 Feb. 1916. Their children were:

Frances Alice Smeltzer b 29 Aug. 1881; m George Daunt 10 Nov. 1906 at Rathcormuc
Naomi Smeltzer b 15 Jan. 1883; nm
Thomas George Smeltzer b 29 Apr. 1884; d 27 May 1929; nm
Caroline Sophia Smeltzer b 20 Aug. 1885; m Thomas Beamish 17 July 1913
Henry Smeltzer b 10 Apr. 1889; d 8 Aug. 1924; nm
Robert Smeltzer b 8 July 1890; d 12 July 1921; nm

Susannah Smeltzer b 5 Oct 1892; nm
John Smeltzer b 4 Mar. 1895 (married after 1934)
Emily Georgina Smeltzer b 27 July 1900

Caroline Beamish stated that her father Robert had a brother Thomas Jr. who married Mary Anne Warburton and a sister Susannah who married James Tate, a farmer from Dundrum, in 1846, and had gone to New York. Nothing had been heard from either. She said her gr-grandfather had married in 1773. Reference was made to a pedigree (not in the PRO file) listing John Smeltzer as the common ancestor. Caroline's father had told the family that the Smeltzers had been in Ireland since about 1700 and had come originally from the Palatine of Bavaria.

Pearson-Bible Claims

A claim was entered by Benjamin Pearson of Renaghmore, son of Maria Smeltzer Bible Pearson on behalf of himself, his sister, 3 half-brothers and a half-sister. He first stated that Kate Smeltzer was an aunt, then a gr-aunt, sister of his grandfather Philip Smeltzer. A pedigree on behalf of Benjamin Pearson was prepared by Rev. Mr. Fisher of Kilcooly and placed in evidence (not in the PRO file.)

Philip Smeltzer, father of Maria Pearson, married Mary Steep. Maria's son William Bible recalled that his grandfather died when he was quite a small child - in the 1860's; his wife Mary died some years later. A neighbor, Hannah Sparling Switzer, called Philip "the blue tooth", his wife "Mary Phil." Their children were:

Robert Smeltzer, last known in Toronto 1910 or Winnipeg 1912 (an old man, nm)
Ann Smeltzer m John Taylor of Clonora, Co. TIP 1839
Margaret Smeltzer m Jacob Cantelon 24 Feb. 1848; em to Canada

Benjamin Pearson b 14 July 1878; m Jane Nesbitt 22 Dec. 1908
Rebecca Pearson d in infancy

Benjamin Pearson stated that his grandfather Philip owned a small farm in Renaghmore where his mother continued to live after the death of her father. His mother referred to "Uncle Tom" and pointed out his nearby farm to her children. Pearson purchased Tom Smeltzer's farm from John Miller in 1930.

Susan Bible McCarthy introduced the leases held by Philip Smeltzer Sr.,Philip Jr. and Thomas Smeltzer in the 1850 Griffith Primary Valuation. Mr.Quinlan, Mrs. Beamish's solicitor, referred to the land registry map of holdings occupied by Benjamin Pearson (not in the PRO file.)

Mrs. McCarthy also presented a pew allotment list for the 1829 Kilcooly Church showing that Thomas and Philip Smeltzer shared Pew No. 18. She identified Jacob (in the pew) as the father of Jacob Cantelon Jr. who married Philip's daughter Margaret in 1848. She believed that Philip was her grandfather and Thomas his brother. Thomas, Philip and Jacob signed minutes of the vestry meeting 24 Apr. 1832.

Mrs. Beamish countered that her father never returned to Kilcooly after selling the farm as he had no one belonging to him there and that she had never heard of Maria Pearson.

Smyth (Taylor) Claim

Mary Taylor Smyth of Mortelstown, Killenaule, Co. TIP, a first cousin of Benjamin Pearson, filed a claim as a descendant of Ann Smeltzer who married John Taylor in 1839. Ninety at the time, Mrs. Smyth died 31 Aug. 1931. Her son John Smyth, executor of her will, represented her interest.

Before Mrs. Smyth's death, Mrs. Beamish's solicitor sent Mrs. Smyth a list of queries. She replied that she had never heard of Kate Smeltzer or Thomas Smeltzer. Her son John, 64, of Killenaule, Thurles, listed the children of the Taylors:

Mary Taylor b 10 Feb. 1863 (claimant): m Thomas Smyth

Other Claims Not Sustained

William Holmes of Lyre, Kilmacthomas, Co. Waterford, stated that his grandfather William, born in Fethard, had gone to Comeragh with his employer in 1821. William married twice, had 10 children. The claimant, son of James, believed his grandfather was a brother of John Holmes.

Margaret Holmes Carroll of Finnane, Mullinahone, Co.TIP, age 77, b 30 July 1855, stated that her grandfather Robert Holmes, born in Fethard, was an older brother of John Holmes, grandfather of the deceased. Robert had two brothers who were nailors in Fethard - John and James. Robert went to Mullinahone about 1810 as Steward for Mr. Despart of Killaghy Castle.

Several affidavits stated that John Holmes, husband of Kate Smeltzer, had no brothers or sisters. George Holmes told his solicitor many years before that his only relatives were distant cousins in the area of Cork. The Holmes and Carroll claims were rejected.

WAS THE GENEALOGY CORRECT?

Research from 1981 through 1985 by Marjorie Smeltzer raises some questions about the Bible-Pearson claim.

Philip Smeltzer (designated from here on as II for identification) was confused with Philip Sr. and his son Philip Jr., master of a school in Kilcooly supported by the Baptist Irish Society. (Commission for Irish Education 1826.)

The father of Philip Smeltzer II was Peter Smeltzer. In 1850 Peter was a lessee in Banse Glebe, Kilmanagh Parish, Co. Kilkenny. Peter, his sons John and Phil shared Pew No. 6 in the 1829 church. Church records offered by Susan McCarthy were for Pew No. 18, allotted to Thomas and Philip Smeltzer and Jacob Cantelon. This was Philip Sr. not Philip II. Jacob Cantelon, who had married Elizabeth Smeltzer in 1804, was Philip Sr.'s brother-in-law. Susan did not submit the occupants of Pew No. 6.

Omitted from the affidavits was Philip II's daughter Barbara, born in 1823, who married Jacob McGee in 1842 and emigrated to Canada. Barbara died 8 Oct. 1900 leaving a number of chilren. Also omitted from affidavits was her sister Elizabeth, born Dec. 1830, who emigrated at age 16, married George Connell in Caledon Twp., ONT 30 Oct. 1853. Elizabeth died 8 Mar. 1926, age 96, leaving a number of descendants. Her death certificate notes Philip (II) as her father. Barbara has been proved to be her sister. Two Bibles, who identified themselves as cousins (sons of Maria Smeltzer Bible Pearson) visited Elizabeth's daughter Elizabeth Carter in Hullett. They did not mention Elizabeth in their affidavits! Elizabeth Connell is also a proved first cousin of Elizabeth Smeltzer Courtney of Bruce Co., ONT., daughter of John. No mention was made of Philip's brother John or his children.

Thomas Smeltzer, brother of Kate Holmes, leased from the Barker estate 35 acres, a house and office (shed) and another 2 acres from Peter Cantling (Cantelon.) Philip Smeltzer Sr. leased 27 acres and a house, rented an acre to Mrs. Archbold. His son Philip Jr. leased 22 acres, a house and offices. Philip Sr., Jr.and Elizabeth rented a house and 9 acres to James Kelly. Also listed in the 1850 GVP were John, a brother of Philip Jr. and William who rented some land. The records do not support the claim of a farm leased to Philip II. He may have been a sub-tenant. Philip II is believed by local inhabitants to have lived in the old Taylor house. Andrew Pearson moved into the Bible house when he married the widowed Maria Smeltzer.

In the 1826 Tithe Applotment for Kilcooly Parish (not offered in evidence) there were 5 Smeltzers: Philip Sr., Renaghmore, his sons Philip Jr. and John in Grange, John son of Paul in Newpark and John son of Peter in Blackcommon. Maria's reference to "Uncle Tom" is not necessarily proof of relationship. Many children called older cousins or family friends "uncle."

Other Smeltzer Heirs

Caroline Smeltzer Beamish, daughter of Robert, stated that he had a sister Susannah Smeltzer Tate who had gone to New York and was presumed deceased. Susannah Smeltzer, born c1821, first married James Tate of Dundrum in 1846. He joined the East India Corps at Clonmel 10 June 1851 and took his family to India. There he died of dropsy 6 Dec. 1856, age 28 (India Office Rec.) On 15 June 1858 she married George Taylor, bandmaster in the EIC (aka John Evans.) When he retired in 1875 they went to E. Bullsbrook, Western Australia, with their 4 children. Susan's

2 surviving sons by James Tate remained with the British Army in India. Susannah died 1 Oct. 1911, age 90. Her children, Stephen George, Robert Smeltzer, Sarah Anne (Wylde) and Alice Elizabeth Taylor, James Jr. and Thomas Tate, were rightful heirs.

Catherine Jane Smeltzer, another daughter of Thomas, born c1833, was omitted from the affidavits. She emigrated to Canada about 1851, married James Black in E. Garafraxa, ONT 14 Jan. 1858. They moved to Brant Twp., Bruce Co., then to Dakota Territory, USA and to Western Australia in 1902 with their grown children. Catherine died in 1927 at age 95. Her surviving children Rupert, Mary Jane, Elizabeth Alice (Moore) and Samuel Wellington Black were rightful heirs.

The marriage index of the Diocese of Kildare shows Thomas Smeltzer married first Allicia Finlay in 1819. This is consistent with the marriage of his sister Kate about 1818. The marriage was apparently short-lived and without issue. Affidavits claimed Alice Baldwin (wife #2) was Thomas' only wife.

Caroline Beamish stated that Thomas Jr. married Mary Anne Warburton and that her gr-grandfather had married in 1773. No proof was included in the file.

Other siblings of Thomas and Kate Smeltzer may be Robert Smeltzer (dates not known) and Margaret Smeltzer who married another John Holmes in 1811. Susan Beamish Fanning, a daughter of Caroline Beamish, believes that Mary Ann Smeltzer Holmes a daughter of Robert and daughter-in-law of Margaret was a first cousin of Catherine Smeltzer Black. Margaret Smeltzer Holmes emigrated to Ontario as a widow with some of her grown children in the late 1840's.

Smyth (Taylor) Claim

This appears questionable since Philip II, son of Peter, is not a proved brother of Thomas.

Sources

The Irish Times 5 July 1933 contained an account of the case in progress. Original affidavits in the matter of George W. Holmes, Caroline Beamish vs. John Smeltzer 1931-34, No. 1437, High Court of Justice, Mr. Justice Johnson presiding, are on file in the Public Record Office, Dublin. Certificates and pedigrees placed in evidence are not in file. Not all the affidavits are in agreement. Omissions and assertions not proved by documents raise questions. Comments are based on the author's personal research, extensive correspondence, interviews and visits with relatives in Ireland, Canada and Australia over a 5-year period. All those involved are deceased. There is no intention of re-opening the case.

PART IV

Early German Smelsers in Canada

THE NOVA SCOTIA EXPERIMENT

Smeltzer is a familiar name today in Nova Scotia, particulary in the Lunenberg-Mahone Bay area. The families are of 18th century Palatine origin but have no proved connection with the Irish-Palatines in Upper Canada. Progenitor of the Nova Scotians is Phillip Schmeltzer, born about 1729, a contemporary of Philip (1733) and Paul (1736) of Co. Limerick.

From 1749 to 1752 a deliberate effort was made to settle "foreign Protestants" in Nova Scotia, recruited from southwestern and central German Protestant municipalities, nearby Swiss cantons and Montebeliard, a French enclave largely Lutheran. The War of the Spanish Succession had been concluded by the Treaty of Trent in 1714. France ceded Nova Scotia, including New Brunswick, to England and was allowed to retain Cape Breton and Ile de St. Jean.

England was eager to remove French and Roman Catholic influence by settling the territory with loyal Protestant subjects. At the same time, she wished to reserve 200,000 acres of forests to provide ship masts for the navy. Efforts to use the forests of New York State for this purpose in 1709 had failed. Economists theorized that large populations in British colonies would consume products made in England.

French settlements already existed in Acadia, around the Minas Basin and the Bay of Fundy. The fertile marshlands had been dyked for agriculture and pastureland. After the war, the French were given a year to become British subjects, taking an oath of allegiance, or to leave the country. Most did neither. Poor communications and lack of roads made the area virtually ungovernable. By 1730 the old French seigneural titles were purchased by the British government.

During the War of the Austrian Succession, a small New England unit captured the French fortress at Louisburg, Cape Breton Island. The Treaty of Aix-la-Chappelle returned Cape Breton to France in 1748. To meet this threat, the British founded a naval station at Chebuco (Halifax) in 1745 and installed Edward Cornwallis as military governor. With him came a garrison and some English settlers, mostly discharged soldiers unsuited to pioneer life. Cornwallis urged the Board to send over Swiss and Germans for a settlement. Unlike other colonies in the New World, Nova Scotia was set up as a royal province; operating funds came from Parliament.

The Palatine Trade

The Palatine Trade, which supplied settlers from the Rhine Valley to the American Colonies, was in high gear. The people were weary of war and feared being pressed into military service. Many of the 200 separate states and free city-states (before German unification) were largely Protestant: Lutheran and Reformed (Calvinist) plus a sprinkling of Anabaptists and Mennonites. The people had a reputation for industry and skill in farming. Agents representing various American colonies, headquartered in Rotterdam, fanned out over the countryside to sign on emigrants for their ships.

John Dick, a young British merchant in Rotterdam, was appointed by the British government in 1750 to recruit settlers for Nova Scotia. For each foreign Protestant he sent, he was to receive one guinea. Dick's handbills described in glowing terms the healthy climate and fertile land. Palatines used their own funds to make the trip down the Rhine, a journey of 4 to 6 weeks because of the 56 toll stations en route to the Dutch border. Agents were under bond to make certain that the emigrants left the country. Ships usually left in May to give emigrants time to dispose of their holdings. Only Protestants were accepted.

Since conditions in Nova Scotia were less attractive than in older colonies, special advantages were offered. Each colonist was to receive 50 acres, free of quit rents* and taxes for 10 years - thereafter, no more than one shilling per annum for every 10 acres. In addition, 10 acres were to be alloted to every dependent woman and child. Full subsistence for a year (victualing) was assured. Arms, ammunition, materials for husbandry, land cultivation, houses, fishing, etc. were to be provided.

* A quit rent was a remnant of feudalism that one held one's land "of" sombody. Its purpose was to show dependence. England calculated that once the lands were colonized the quit rents would be a continuing source of revenue to support the colony.

The Voyages

Most of the prospective settlers were taken on as redemptioners. In the older colonies this usually meant an indenture for service to a "redeemer" in return for payment of passage. Because there were no redeemers in Nova Scotia, the Lords of Trade agreed that passengers might pay their passage by employment on government works.

Dick's ships may have been slightly better than others. In 1751 he installed ventilators between decks. Bunks were built in port and torn out on arrival to provide cargo space for the return trip. Average sailing time was 3 months. Answers to local problems could take 9 months. Passenger capacity was rated in terms of "freights." An adult over 14 was full freight; children 4-14 were 1/2 freights; infants up to 4 were not counted. Space was reserved for a number of freights, regardless of the number of individuals. A ship was provisioned for 14 weeks, with an allowance of 2 qts. of water per day. Usually the food was cooked and served cold.

Arrivals

Settling the newcomers did not go smoothly. The French around the Bay of Fundy continued to occupy their lands. Both Gov. Cornwallis and the Lords of Trade lacked experience with problems of settlement. Those who arrived in 1751 had not been settled when 918 more arrived. Dick was asked to halt recruiting but claimed he had signed on too many to stop. Five additional ships arrived in 1752, bringing another 1,007. By that time there were 988 families -2,270 individuals. Dutch clerks who wrote down the names of embarking emigrants spelled them as they sounded.

The Gale, on which Phillip Schmeltzer sailed, was the last to arrive in 1752 and the last before emigration was suspended. After a stormy passage of 4 months, it arrived about 6 Sept. Passengers remained on board for another 2 weeks. Some had boarded when they reached Rotterdam, 20 weeks before. Twenty-nine adults and 11 new-borns died on the voyage. Rough barracks were built for the passengers because of their late arrival. They were temporarily quartered at St. George's Island and worked at odd jobs. Without land to work, the colonists were unable to provide for themselves. Many refused to pay their passage. Some defected to the French at Louisburg. "Compassionate victualing" was authorized for those whose year of free victualing had run out.

Grants of land could not be made to foreigners, although they had been promised 50 acres. For temporary housing, Halifax was surveyed, streets laid out and lots numbered. A card marked with the number of a lot was drawn from a pack by each settler. Garden lots, further from town, were assigned similiarly. Once the magnificent forests were removed, the soil proved thin and poor.

The Lunenberg Settlement

For a permanent settlement, the area around Mushanush (Mahone Bay) and Merlingash Bay was decided on and surveyed in 50-acre lots, assigned by drawing lots. Most of the area was heavily wooded. Some wood was transported and sold, but lack of roads and work animals made it impossible to haul wood from inland farms. Small vessels were chartered from New England in May 1753 to move the settlers to Lunenberg. While local tradition has attributed the name Lunenberg to Hanoverian settlers, Dr. Winthrop Bell proved that the township was named before the settlers arrived. Only one or two were from Hanover. The name was chosen to honor George II, whose ancestors had been Electors of Brunswick-Lunenberg.

The Early Years

In Dec. 1753 the settlers were in rebellion. Some had been forwarded at government expense, others had to work out their passage. Their resources were exhausted, their clothing in rags. The Lords of Trade released them from working out their passage. Settlers began to plant oats, turnips and potatoes. In 1754 they received some livestock, divided by lot. A drought that year ruined most of the crop and the following year many cattle starved. A few men returned to Halifax. In 1775, after continued problems with the French, the Governor resolved to deport those who refused to take an oath of allegiance. An expedition tried to drive the Acadian cattle and horses to the coast but without roads many died.

The Seven Years War was soon raging in Europe. Its counterpart in the Colonies, the French and Indian War, had begun in 1754. Some Acadians and Indians roamed at will. Indian warfare - killing scalping and carrying off settlers - continued from 1756 to 1770. French privateers harrassed coastal shipping in 1759. The winter of 1758-9 ruined most of the harvest. In 1760 the Lords of Trade resolved never again to give assistance to Nova Scotia settlers!

THE BERCZY SETTLEMENT

Many Smelsers in Ontario, especially York and Grey Cos., are descended from Johann Schmeltzer, Sr. He emigrated directly from one of the south German principalities in 1792 nearly 40 years before the Irish-Palatine Smeltzers and 40 years after Phillip Schmeltzer arrived in Nova Scotia in 1752. Johann had been recruited by William Berczy, an agent for a colony in upper New York State, moved to Canada with the other Berczy settlers in 1793.

Before the 19th century, settlers from Britain were reluctant to take up land east of Kingston, Ont., feeling it was too far away. To encourage settlement, Lt. Gov. John Simcoe offered free land grants in Upper Canada in 1791. Meanwhile, Sir William Johnstone Pulteney, MP had acquired a million and a quarter acres of bush in the Genesee region of New York State, which he and his associates hoped to sell at a profit. The plan fell through and they engaged William Berczy (born Wilhelm Albrecht Moll) as an agent to recruit German peasants with basic skills as servants and settlers. Wilhelm was baptised in Swabia in 1744. Soon after, the family moved to Vienna. (Berczy, pronounced "Berk-sy" is Hungarian for Albert or Bertie.) His objective was 6,000 immigrants a year for a total of 30,000 to 50,000 settlers.

Two ships sailed under the Danisn flag. The Brig Catharina carried 134, mostly singles, the Heinrich & Georg mostly families. The group was made up of Hanoverians, South Germans, some Swiss and Dutch. The Catharina left the Danish port of Altona, near Hamburg, 2 May 1792. Heat spoiled most of the food and the captain changed his course, landing at Newport on 28 July 1792. He proceeded to Philadelphia arriving 3 Aug. The second ship arrived in New York in October. Passengers joined the rest of the Berczy group two months later. To reach their destination, the band cut a road through from Northumberland, PA to the Genesee River and Ontario. A few Pennsylvanians joined along the way. The group averaged 90 families.

The immigrants were to be given 25 acres, to be operated on a share crop basis for 6 years. At the end of that period the tenant could buy 25 acres at a reduced market price. If settlers preferred, they could contract as servants.

Berczy became dissatisfied with Capt. Williamson, Manager of the Genesee Association, and looked for another home for his settlers. Learning of the Simcoe proclamation, he organized a German Company and requested a million acres. The company was granted 64,000. Gov. Simcoe suggested that the development be in Markham Twp. back of York, then being laid out to be Upper Canada's capital. The settlers arrived in Queenston and Chippewa the end of June and spent the winter in the Niagara Peninsula, finally reaching their lands in 1794. The line ran from York (Toronto) along what is now Yonge St. The little company of 185 erected a saw mill, warehouse and temporary huts along the Concession line and cleared about 45 miles of Yonge St. Tools, oxen and cows, as well as daily rations, were supplied by the company. The winter of 1795-6 was one of severe cold. Johann Schmeltzer, then over 50, was among those who died. A third of the settlers went back to Niagara.

In 1797 the Council rescinded the land grants on undeveloped land and Berczy's company lost its acreage. The German settlers were fulfilling their obligations but many still owed the company money. Land sales were slow and Berczy had been using his own money to support widows and children. Personal tragedies and debts followed him the rest of his life.

A list of Berczy settlers thought to have left Germany has been compiled by Robert Shank ( ONT Archives). No familiar Palatine names, except Schmeltzer, are in the list.

THE RHENISH PRUSSIANS

In the decades when Irish Smeltzers were leaving for Canada, two Smelsers arrived in Haldimand Co., Ont. from the continent: Frederick in 1833 and Valentin in 1856.

Census records show Haldimand Co. Smelsers born in "Prussia." After the Napoleonic Wars, the Congress of Vienna gave Prussia additional territory to the east and west in 1815. In the west, it included the Rhine Valley north of Mainz, part of Alsace-Lorraine, the Saarland and Lower Saxony. It was known as "Rhenish Prussia." Bavaria was awarded the Lower Palatinate - the "Bavarian Palatinate." Thus the Smelsers of Haldimand Co. were not Prussians but Palatines.

Virtually all of Europe was bankrupt after two decades of war. Thousands of men from the Rhineland had been forced into Napoleon's Army and died in the Russian campaign. The old Holy Roman Empire, led by Austria, was dead. Prussia, now in the ascendency, was bent on a united Protestant Germany under the control of the House of Hohenzollern. After acquiring new territories, Prussia instituted military conscription. Many of the people in the Rhine Valley were Mennonites, opposed to military service on religious grounds. Jacob Lint was probably the first of the Rhenish Prussians to settle in Haldimand Co., soon followed by the Cuslers and the Smelsers, related to him by marriage.

Rainham Twp. was surveyed in the late 18th century. The first white settlers to arrive, about 1791, were Jacob Hoover and his five sons, Swiss-German Mennonites who had come from Pennsylvania to the Niagara Peninsula. They followed the "trail of the black walnut," trees believed to indicate fertile land. The first settlements were along the shoreline and the banks of the Grand River. The eastern part of Haldimand Co. was largely an Indian Reserve, given to the Iroquois by Sir Frederick Haldimand, Lt.Gov. of Upper Canada, in return for their help to the British during the American Revolution. Soon the Indians began to sell parcels of their land to friends, opening the area to settlers.

At the time it was surveyed Haldimand Co. was covered with timber, chiefly pine and oak. For many years lumbering was the principal occupation. The "Rainham Road" was little more than a track between CON I and CON II, best suited to winter travel by ox-drawn sled. Neighbors were far apart, markets and mills hard to reach. Game and wild birds supplied meat. Corn was a staple, white bread a rarity, clothing homespun. Many of the settlers came with skills in other trades that helped them survive.

The Hoovers cleared 2500 acres along the lakeshore and established a mill. The Rainham Road to Dunnville, surveyed in 1829, created a market town near the mouth of the Grand River. In the 1830's, more families, mainly Germans, began to arrive, clearing farms further inland. Trinity Lutheran church records in Fisherville show 95% of the immigrants came from Alsace-Lorraine, Baden-Württemberg, Rhenish Prussia or the Bavarian Palatinate. Valentin Smelser was from Hinderlingsweiler (Rhenish Prussia.) The sister-in-law of Frederick Smelser's wife was born in Mainzweiler (Saarland). Church registers for some of the villages have been filmed by LDS (see Ronald Smelser's Survey of the German Collection, 1979). Rainham was organized as a municipality in 1850. Many of the early families are still on their original homestead farms.

In the early 1800's there were two religious groups, Mennonites and Baptists. A few families belonging to other sects might meet together with a lay preacher. Many of the early Smelsers were married by Rev. Thomas Stillwell of Walpole, a Baptist preacher, as a matter of convenience. Since he was not German, he often had difficulty with the spelling of their names. After 1850 the dominant sects were three conservative churches: Mennonite, Lutheran and Evangelical Brethren.

S. PHILLIP SCHMELTZER (1729-1809)
m Apollonia Graf (1726-1814)
Lunenberg, Nova Scotia

The first Smeltzer in Canada was Johann Phillip who arrived in Halifax at age 23, unmarried, on the last trip of the Gale in 1752. He was one of the Palatines recruited by John Dick for settlement in Nova Scotia to dilute the French influence there. Identification of Phillip has been made by historians who compared his poor signature with his name on the victualing lists. He was probably Georg Phillip of Sandhofen, a village near Mannheim, who migrated to the "new land"in 1752. A descendant believes his middle names were Georges Edouard.

On 1 Jan. 1753, six months after arriving, he married a fellow passenger Apollonia Graf, a young widow 3 years his senior. Her husband Jacob died on the voyage. The name of her young son Christian Graf follows that of Phillip and Apollonia on the victualing list. The minister, who was not German, spelled the names Philip Shermittler and Apollonia Creve! An unmarried man and a young widow with a child undoubtedly found it difficult to survive in a pioneer settlement.

The victualing lists show Phillip Schmeltzer Sept.-Oct. 1752 and Philip Schmaltzar Feb.-Apr. 1753. In Dec. 1753 he is Phillip Schmeltser in the Return of Arms, Rudolf's Div. (a tally of muskets issued.) The family continued on the victualing lists in 1755-57, with the addition of their first child Barbara. Phillip participated in the Cattle Expedition in 1756 to drive in cattle abandoned by departing Acadians. In 1760 he registered Lot F-4 Rudolph's Div. In a 3rd drawing for 300 acres on 3 Dec. 1704 he received E-1 Fourth Div. A township grant 10 June 1784 gave him 454 acres.

The foreign Protestants had been without a Lutheran Church. In 1770-1 Phillip donated a small sum toward the building of a church, contributed a little volunteer labor and signed the rolls. Phillip died 23 Mar. 1809 at Mahone Bay and was buried by the Lutheran Church. Apollonia died in 1814.

Phillip & Apollonia had 4 children:

S1. ANNA BARBARA SMELTZER bp 1/9/1754; m Johann Urbanus Binter
S2. JOHANN PETER SMELTZER bp 26/11/1757; m Anna Dorothea Acker
S3. JOHANNES SMELTZER bp 5/1/1760; m Susanna Gertraud Mader
S4. JOHANN PHILLIP SMELTZER bp 3/10/76; lived past 70. Mentally retarded, he is omitted from some lists as genealogically expendable.

The next generations are registered in German in the local churches. In the 1838 census there were 8 Smeltzer families in Lunenberg (MS220) with a total of 43 children! Many Smeltzer families still live in Mahone Bay and Halifax.

Y1. JOHN SMELSER Jr. (1791-1859)
m Mary Ann Puterbaugh (1797-1874)
Markham Twp., Ontario

Johann Schmeltzer, Sr., John's father, was the first of that name to settle in Upper Canada. He bears no known relation to the Irish-Palatine Smeltzers who arrived in the early 19th century. Johann was recruited by William Berczy in south Germany to settle in the Genesee region of upper New York State. Berczy moved 90 of his families to Ontario in 1794. There John Sr., a widower over 50, died the following winter. His young son John Jr., born in 1791 in Germany, was bound out to service until he was 21. He is not on the 1803 census of Berczy settlers. Tradition says he ran away from his master to Pennsylvania.

The History of Markham shows John Schmeltzer on CON I, Lot 22 Markham Twp. after June 1795 and before 1798. On 26 June 1804 his name is recorded on Lot 22 (200 acres) the Patent issued 12 Feb 1810. In the War of 1812, John Jr. was a private attached to Capt. Heward's Flank Co. 3rd Reg. York Militia present at Detroit. He received a medal for bravery and fidelity and was granted NE½ Lot 15 CON II Caledon for his service (9 July 1823 on Land Reg). Apparently he never occupied it. In 1821 and 1823 he served on the Petit and Grand Juries of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the Home District. He was on the King Twp. Voters List for 1837.

He married Mary Ann Puterbaugh of Vaughan Twp. (born in PA) on 29 Nov. 1814 at St. James Anglican Cath., Rev. John Strachen, rector. Wit: Jacob Spiker. (License John Smittser & Mary Butterbogh.) Spelling variations are typical of German names written down by English clerks.

After the war John purchased a bush farm in Vaughan Twp. On 3 June 1828 he bought CON V Lot 1 (200 acres) King Twp. from Elijah Williams for $400. King Twp. was first surveyed in 1800. Its records go back to 1809 when it had 33 families, 160 inhabitants. Here John built a brick home for his family, which grew to 10 children. On 16 Mar. 1833 he purchased Lot 2 (200 acres) for $400 from the Canada Co. which had received the Crown Patent in 1829. Later that year he sold the east 100 acres.

John died in 1859 leaving a substantial estate. The family farm was divided among 3 unmarried sons living at home. Henry, Joseph and John received the homestead; Henry parts of Lots 1 & 2; Joseph west part of Lot 2; John west part of Lot 1 (82 acres each.) Their brother Isaac bought 100 acres on CON VIII, also owned CON VI Lot 1. The original house is occupied by James Finch, a gr-gr-grandson of John Smelser Jr.
